Feds say 'no way' for funding widening option

By DAVID LELAND

JUST AS the idea of widening the existing Highway 1 appeared to be gaining widespread support, the Federal Highway Administration has indicated it will not provide financial backing for such a project.

The FHWA is scheduled to contribute 80 percent of the funding for the Caltrans-proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway project, currently estimated to cost about $34 million.

Widening the existing freeway with interchanges at Carpenter Street and Carmel Valley Road would cost about $7 million, according to Caltrans officials.

"We have not found support in the FHWA for widening the existing alignment," said R.C. Slovensky, FHWA area engineer, during a telephone interview Wednesday.

Current plans for a freeway running through Hatton Canyon have been the subject of fierce debate for many years, but now have been termed unrealistic because of existing and threatened litigation.

Moreover, state law mandates that projects that have seen cost rise more than 120 percent need to be recertified as the "most cost-effective" in their jurisdiction.

Costs have indeed risen by that amount and the Monterey County Transportation Commission is slated to hear the matter at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, March 7, in Salinas.

The principal stumbling block for federal funding has occurred because Caltrans supports the Hatton Canyon Freeway in the environmental impact statement.

The EIS is currently being reviewed by the FHWA and is scheduled for an April release.

Slovensky said the FHWA cannot redirect its support without backing out of the environmental process altogether and starting over.

"We're not prepared to do that at this stage," he said.

While widening the existing alignment is contained in the final EIS, it is discredited as a short-term solution by Caltrans.

"They have the same reservations that we do," said Caltrans District Director Tom Pollock. "There's too damn much traffic on that road, and it's growing."

If the transportation commission changes its mind and decides to support a widening alternative, Pollock indicated that he will attempt to sway officials at the FHWA in Sacramento to lend financial support.

Pollock stopped short of predicting an outcome to such a proposition.

"The FHWA is not in the habit of saying they won't fund something, unless they see a real deficiency," he said, referring to problems such as the road being unsafe or it being an unwise expenditure. "Other than that, they pretty much leave it up to the state."

Slovensky said his agency would examine a proposal from Caltrans to widen the existing highway, but would not fund the road unless it can find support within the FHWA — a commodity that is currently non-existent.

'We have not found support in the FHWA for widening the existing alignment.'

Recent storms help delay 40-percent water rationing

By NANCY HILLS

THERE WON'T be 40-percent rationing this year because of the recent rains, according to the water district.

The storms over the weekend brought enough water to the area to offset the advent of 40-percent rationing, but not enough to end the current 20-percent cutback, according to Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board chairman Dick Heuer.

'It looks good. On the basis of the recent rainfall this weekend, we can state with certainty that we won't have to go on 40 percent rationing.'
— Dick Heuer

"It looks good. On the basis of the recent rainfall this weekend, we can state with certainty that we won't have to go on 40 percent rationing," he said.

But the drought still marches on, district geohydrologist Joe Oliver explained.

"Is the drought over? The answer to that is a resounding 'NO'," he said.

The Carmel Valley aquifer is still not refilled and, in fact, the river has already retreated from two and a half miles from its mouth, where it was at the height of the storm, to four miles as of Tuesday. The river retreats because it is being soaked up by the aquifer below. The area from Schulte Bridge through Rancho Canada is where many of California-American Water Co.'s big wells are located and the aquifer is particularly empty along that stretch.

The river dried up so fast, Oliver said, that many steelhead and Pacific lamprey eels were left stranded to die on the dry river bed.

"At one point, it was retreating at about a foot a minute," he said.

Oliver said that the figures were still coming in, but rain gauges around the San Clemente Dam recorded a rainfall of 2.11 inches and further upstream at Los Padres a rainfall of 1.78 inches. That brings the total rainfall for this rain year to 9.72, short of the "normal" rainfall in those areas of 14.91 inches.

Rainfall up near the dams is much more important than rainfall in Monterey and Carmel because it is near the major watershed area, the Ventana Wilderness.

the biggest problem is not just the rainfall but the runoff. The past few years have been so dry that runoff is about 15 percent of normal because the parched ground soaks everything up.

If it rains soon, without allowing the ground to dry out, then the area could get some good runoff, Oliver said.

That has been one of the problems in the past few storms. The sunny dry weather in-between has dried out the ground so the benefit of the rainfall is reduced.

This last weekend garnered about 2,000 acre feet for the aquifer, but it needs about another 8,000 acre feet — very rough estimates — to completely refill, Oliver said.

Storm warning

LAST WEEK'S heavy rainstorm brought this pine tree crashing down onto the Sunday School building of All Saints Episcopal Church early last Friday. Fortunately there was very little damage to the building and no one was injured. "It was held by the roots pretty well; it landed on the roof and bent a rain gutter, but that's about it," said Father Carl Hansen of the church. "We were lucky it came down so slowly." Ironically, church officials had asked the city's permission to remove the tree because it was dying, but were refused, because it "wasn't dead yet," said Hansen. A nearby dead tree was removed only two weeks earlier. Blue Sky Tree Service came in a cut up and removed the tree. The church is located at Dolores and Ninth. Armed robbery suspects nabbed

TWO SEASIDE men and two juveniles were arrested on suspicion of armed robbery Monday morning after allegedly robbing a Carmel man of $6.

Arrested and held in lieu of $10,000 bail were Sherman Douglas Allen, 19, and Vernon James Washington, 18. The two juveniles' names were not released.

The alleged victim James Jauregui, 32, told Carmel police that he was approached by the men while he was walking through Devendorf Park, shortly after midnight on Feb. 12.

A short time later the suspects allegedly tried to rob a person in Pacific Grove, who was able to escape and identify their car. The men were arrested a short time later in Monterey.

Candidates forum set for next week

TWO CANDIDATES forums are scheduled for the week of Feb. 25 through March 3.

The first is the Carmel Residents Association forum at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 27 in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center. It was originally scheduled for Monday, Feb. 26. All council and mayoral candidates are scheduled to attend and Jim Holliday will be moderator.

The candidates will have five minutes to make a statement, in alphabetical order beginning with the two mayoral candidates.

After the statements each candidate will be offered a chance to ask any other candidate two questions for a total of 30 minutes.

Following that, there will be a five-minute intermission.

At 8:50 p.m. questions will be taken from the audience and answers will be limited to two to three minutes. The meeting should adjourn at 9:30 p.m.

The Carmel Business Association forum is scheduled for 8 a.m. Thursday, March 1 at La Playa hotel in Carmel. Candidates have been given five questions to answer, most involving the city's relationship with the business district. Once the candidates have answered the questions the audience will be able to ask their own questions. The public is invited to attend and ask questions.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. While there is no limit on length, brevity is encouraged. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address and signature. A phone number is needed for verification only. Anonymous letters are not accepted.

Correction

(Editor's Note: Because of a typesetting error, two letters in the Feb. 8 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone were inadvertently "combined" — a majority of James Craig's letter on the Carmel Valley post office controversy and a small portion of Rudd Crawford's letter on the Pebble Beach Co. Unfortunately, Crawford ended up with only two lines from his letter and his name on Craig's letter and Craig's name didn't appear at all. In fairness to both letter writers we will run both letters in their entirety. We sincerely regret any inconvenience or embarassment this may have caused.)

Historical inaccuracies

Dear Editor:

During the past year, a series of rather presumptuous articles and letters by local history buffs declaiming against historical accounts of the beginning of Carmel Valley's post office in 1889 have culminated in the most recent diatribe by Barbara Marks, using the inaccurate historical conclusions of postal historian Rick Wilkerson to impugn the integrity of local historians who recommended that Carmel Valley residents celebrate a centennial last year based on the opening of the Valley's first post office.

As one of those historians who used photocopied documents from the Postal Service archives in Washington, D.C. in my published history of the U.S. Post Office in Carmel Valley in 1889, I'd like to express my resentment against the stated and implied slights against my character and the support which local, establishment-oriented newspapers have shown for these unprofessional, revisionists of history.

Barbara Marks has produced no historical evidence or research of her own to substantiate her extravagant claims of untruthfulness and lack of integrity on the part of historians who don't agree with her. Mr. Wilkerson, who has researched the subject, contradicts himself in his own published postal history in the December 1968 issue of "Noticias del Puerto de Monterey" which states that Carmel Valley's first post office was indeed located deep in Carmel Valley in 1893, where he himself calls it the "Carmel P.O."

Since we all agree that the Carmel P.O. in 1893 was located 14 miles east on the Valley Road, where Joe Hitchcock, Jr. himself also remembered it as a child, why didn't Mr. Wilkerson bother to explain in his lengthy article in The Herald how it could have been located at Point Lobos in 1889, then allegedly moved to Carmel Valley by 1893?

To substantiate his contradiction with federal postal records, Mr. Wilkerson relies on an erroneous report in a Salinas newspaper, a report whose existence is surprising since no issues from that October-November date survive in the Monterey Peninsula newspapers of that era. The Salinas Weekly Index report was probably guesswork, a deduction from the fact that Antonio Nunes was a part owner of a saloon located at Point Lobos.

Mr. Wilkerson's side further contradicts itself in the published assertions of an editor of a California postal publication which agrees with us that the Carmel Post Office was located in Carmel Valley in 1893, but ironically concludes that the omission of any notice in an esoteric postal publication of that time mentioning any Carmel P.O. in 1889 proves that it never commenced operation anywhere, despite notations to the effect that it was "discontinued" when the postmaster neglected to file periodic reports.

Mr. Wilkerson and his publisher friend, regardless of their differences, obviously couldn't imagine that the "Daily Postal Bulletin" depended on the filed reports of postmasters for its listings, and since Antonio Nunes neglected to file his reports — leading to the Carmel P.O.'s closure in 1990 — the "Daily Postal Bulletin" had no information about the Carmel P.O.'s existence.

This and many other historical inaccuracies in Mr. Wilkerson's article and letters suggest that Barbara Marks and others who have impugned my personal integrity, as well as the accuracy of my published historical articles about Carmel Valley, have been much too quick to criticize. Their slanderous inferences make me wonder if they harbor ulterior motives.

James D. Craig
Pebble Beach

Responsible company

Dear Editor:

I am greatly disturbed with the way our county supervisors are being so heavy handed in clobbering the Pebble Beach Co.

I am a member of the Open Space Advisory Committee. In the last 10 years, I have seen the company listen to us and to follow our recommendations. This committee is composed of three eminent local botanists, two from the Pebble Beach Co., two from the Del Monte Forest Foundation, and two or three at large. This is an independent committee beholden to no one. It is the committee that took two years and seven revisions in developing the management plan for the open spaces in the Del Monte Forest. This plan was so good that the county accepted it as the Land Use Plan. The Coastal Commission liked it so well that they have used it as a model for other counties to use.

True, I would rather not see the Inn at Spanish Bay where it is. But it has not squeezed out any native plants where there was only a wilderness of pampas grass, genists, and iceplant, none of which is native. In return, 226 homes will never be guilt in the Gowan Cypress area and so 350 acres have been added to the 80 acres of the Morse Reserve. These acres will shortly be turned over to the Foundation as permanent open space, all 430 acres of it.

If our supervisors would try to understand what the company is trying to do and use some cooperation instead of using cannon to shoot down mosquitos, the enhancement of the 17 Mile Drive and other projects might now be finished.

By this letter I am inviting any group of 10 to 15 interested people to call me so that I can walk them through the Morse Reserve. They will see two plants that grow nowhere else in the world, four rare plants, see the recovery of the pigmy forest after the '87 fire. This is a two mile walk and takes two hours because I talk so much. Give me a call. Guided walks are permitted and forest residents can explore there whenever they want.

I hope some of the supervisors will accept my invitation so they can see what is really happening in the forest and realize that the Pebble Beach Co. is not all bad. It is a large company and sometimes the left hand does not know what the right hand is doing. Now it does.

Who should run City Hall?

IS RULE by neighborhood associations replacing the role of the Carmel City Council? Unlike Eastern Europe, Carmel seems to be moving towards party rule if the influence of the Carmel Residents Association is as strong as its leadership suggests and as bold as its election strategy implies.

But this election season, CRA could only muster one candidate from its ranks to run for one of the three seats open on the council. Is this apathy, or a bold stroke designed to get a third vote on the council? CRA-endorsed members Ken White and Jim Wright, now in a minority position, would move to a majority role if CRA gets another vote on the council. A CRA council majority would be capable of ignoring the votes of the mayor and the fifth council member, and perhaps the rest of us too.

It looks like CRA strategy is to get that third vote and ignore the other races. While that may be good CRA strategy, a CRA-dominated city council is a bad idea for the community.

Why? Because government operates best when all sides are equally represented. That way, it takes a good proposal and a sound, clear argument to get anything done. On the other hand, providing CRA, or any special interest group, with a clear majority means that CRA leadership (including newly elected officers Clayton Anderson, Jim Holliday and David Maradei), not the electorate, may become the power behind the scenes. We, you and me, lose part of our voice in city hall if that happens.

After the Eastwood administration took office, there was a dramatic swing away from the Townsend administration policies of tight, nitpick regulation towards a "do-as-you-please" system where city hall existed to facilitate change. The city's role of acting as a check and balance on change was reduced; only later revived by public demand. From my perspective, while I disagreed with the arrogance of the Townsend majority, I was also concerned by the 180 degree swing the other way. Both extremes were upsetting and failed to win long-term public support.

We must encourage all viewpoints to be explored and debated, all alternatives studied and the best policy adopted: that, after all, is the essential role of government.

During the early months of the Eastwood administration, CRA was formed to provide much-needed dissent, perspective and strength to the few voices who didn't agree with the sweeping changes to (among other issues), our general plan which sought to strip Carmel of much-needed land use policies. Such changes would have been tragic for this community if passed. Fortunately, they were not passed by the Eastwood administration, who listened to the public. And the result of that debate was adoption of an improved general plan.

As one of the founders of CRA and its first chairman (until I resigned upon appointment to the Carmel Planning Commission in 1987), I believed in the role of neighborhood or resident associations. I still do, to a degree. CRA can perform a valuable service to the community. It could once again provide factual, impartial analysis of issues facing us and forums for debate and understanding of these issues so we can better exercise our role as informed voters and citizens. Unfortunately, CRA has chosen to focus on programs such as its (Monterey Peninsula?) Citizen of the Year award. And while I respect its decision to do so, I feel CRA has lost its reputation for advocating reasoned, balanced city decisions.

Thus, I challenge CRA members hosting the candidates' forum on Feb. 27th and the members-only endorsement caucus on March 1st, to keep in mind the need for responsible, balanced government when listening to and supporting the candidates seeking our confidence on April 10th.

But, above all, let's not sacrifice our individual voices in City Hall for any special interest group.

Crying wolf

Dear Editor:

I was as amazed as I was puzzled reading Lloyd A. Jones' guest editorial "Unfortunate Trend" in which he claims that developers are overloading the county planning apparatus with complex applications which are threatening Big Sur.

As I have been deeply involved in protecting this coast for the past 10 years I am aware of any threatening development and I can say with certainty that there has very limited building in Big Sur since the county took over issuing permits under the LCP, and certainly no "development" as that word is understood. The county has been doing an exceptional job in both implementing the Coastal Act and in protecting Big Sur.

If Mr. Jones has evidence of any real threats, then he should come forward with the evidence now, otherwise, we must conclude that he is "crying wolf," and has ulterier motives.

Mr. Jones suggests that the county work with Coastal Commission legal staff. But the stated purpose of the Coastal Act was to put protection into the hands of the local people who understand and love the land, and take it out of the hands of the remote Coastal Commission bureaucracy. Indeed, the only visible building in Big Sur since the LCP was certified is being done by the state and federal governments — the very body that Mr. Jones wants to protect us from building!!! This would indeed be putting the wolf in charge of the sheep.

Mr. Jones' second suggestion is that the county hire private independent counsel, and one wonders just whose toast is going to be buttered by this plan — certainly not the people of Monterey County. Washington has been playing around with "independent counsel" for some years now at a cost of millions of dollars, a lot of publicity for politicians and no real benefits for the public.

The third boondoggle suggested by Mr. Jones are "in-house land use workshop/symposiums, employing top experts." Might one ask what top experts? Again, this has the smell of diverting the badly needed county resources to some enterprising private organization or individuals.

As Mr. Jones states in his editorial, "we

City set to legalize 'illegal' granny units

By NANCY HILLS

NO ONE knows exactly how many there are, but they could soon be legal anyway.

While few show up to speak at the public hearings on the issue, legalization of subordinate units, called second kitchens for years, could affect more residents individually than almost any other issue in the city.

The commission is scheduled to put the finishing touches on the ordinance that will legalize, with registration, existing units and prohibit new ones except in hardship cases.

The commission will meet at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 28 in Carmel City Council Chambers. If the commission approves it, the new law will go to the council for its consideration in March.

A subordinate unit is defined in the ordinance as "an attached or detached residential dwelling unit which provides complete independent living facilities for one of more persons on the same building site on which a single-family residence is situated."

It should provide an area for cooking, sleeping, sanitation and living.

Second kitchens are the mainstay of "affordable" housing in Carmel, serving much the same purpose here as blocks of apartments in other cities.

The illicit units have proliferated ever since Carmel's residential district began, and debates on their legalization have kept city councils entertained for decades.

Because, illegal or not, the units are such an integral part of the housing stock, and the rents collected often an integral part of the budgets of the homeowners, past councils have avoided settling the problem.

Fairness is one major question that has continued to plague the city in its attempts to bring order to the situation. Legalizing the existing units and allowing new ones basically changes the zoning in the residential district from single-family homes to duplexes.

Most councils have not wanted to do that, but also have been unable to answer the question of how to legalize the existing units, which rewards those who built when it was illegal, while prohibiting new units, punishing those who waited until the units became legal.

A recent state law which legalizes the units if there is no municipal law prohibiting them, has forced the current council to face the issue head-on. An urgency ordinance that specifically prohibits new units will expire in June.

The draft permanent ordinance answers the question of fairness by allowing new units if there is a hardship need for one.

Once recommended by the commission and approved by the council, legalization could begin as early as May 1.

As written, the new law establishes an "amnesty" period of six months. Owners of existing units must register their subordinate units during this time to qualify for legalization.

Currently, any units built after 1929 are illegal. That was the year the city approved a residential zoning code that prohibits more than one living unit per building site.

To qualify for legalization the unit must meet minimum health and safety standards. Those standards, taken from the state building code, state the unit must have:

- Have a minimum living area of 220 square feet.
- A kitchen sink, cooking appliance and refrigerator facilities, each having a clear working space of not less than 30 inches in front.
- Sufficient light and ventilation for living and kitchen use.
- A separate bathroom, containing a water closet, lavatory and bathtub or shower.
- Electrical, gas, water and sewer service.
- A separate closet.

Additionally, the unit:

- Cannot have an entrance that encroaches upon required setbacks and impacts the living spaces of adjoining properties.
- Must have at least one off-street parking space on the property.
- The cumulative impact of the number of subordinate units in the immediate neighborhood does not adversely affect the area's character through excessive on-street parking or noise.
- There can be only one subordinate unit per property.

To qualify for legalization, the unit must have been in existence before April 5, 1988, when the city council approved general plan amendments on subordinate units. The owner must provide proof of the unit's existence or sign an affidavit swearing that it existed prior to the cutoff date.

Once legalized, owners may make improvements to the units, within certain restrictions.

No subordinante unit on a building site of less than 6,000 square feet can be increased in size, off-street parking must be provided and no detached unit can be expanded to exceed 400 square feet.

Any existing unit already greater than 400 square feet will be legalized, but it will be "non-conforming," meaning it cannot be expanded any further.

NEW UNITS can only be added to a property if there is a need for it due to "a hardship."

"A hardship is based on an infirmed or handicapped person who finds it necessary to live with or near a companion under conditions where separate, self-contained facilities are important to both parties," the ordinance now reads.

The unit must be converted into a guest house or regular living area for the main house once the hardship is "abated." The hardship will be reviewed annually by the planning department.

These units are subject to some special conditions, including having to meet the health, safety and building codes.

Converting floor space that was "bootlegged" on to a house or on the building site without permits will be illegal. It is all right to covert a garage as long as the conversion meets building codes and adequate parking is still provided on-site.

Any unit added to a property of less than 6,000 square feet must be attached to the main house and be able to be converted into normal living space when the hardship has ended.

Detached units, allowed on properties 6,000 square feet and larger, must be converted to a guest house — sans cooking area — once the hardship terminates.

Supplemental EIR for Rancho San Carlos now available

By DAVID LELAND

SEVERAL YEARS in the making, the supplemental environmental impact report for Rancho San Carlos is now available for public comment.

Recently purchased from the Oppenheimer family trust for $70 million by San Francisco-based Pacific Union Co., the 20,000-acre Rancho San Carlos stretches along much of the length of Carmel Valley.

Specifically, the ranch ranges from three to five miles in width and is about 10 miles in length.

Included in the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, Rancho San Carlos has been the subject of debate since the Monterey County Board of Supervisors approved a measure permitting a maximum buildout of 2,000 residential units for the property in 1982.

In 1984, a citizens advisory committee recommended that the property be zoned to only accommodate 40 acres per unit, allowing a maximum of 500 residential units with a mandatory clustering requirement.

Later that year, the Monterey County Planning Commission rejected that recommendation and upheld the land use designation for 2,000 units and 200- to 400-unit hotel to be clustered at San Francisquito Flat.

But supervisors changed the density to one house per 160 acres, or a total of 125 units for the property.

Further, language permitting hotel uses was deleted from the land use plan, as was wording requiring Rancho San Carlos to reduce traffic and water impacts.

The matter has been at a standstill since October 1985, when the Monterey County Superior Court ruled that supervisors set aside their resolution.

That judgment was appealed by the board and upheld in a higher court.

Representatives from Pacific Union Co. are tentative regarding plans for the ranch, but have indicated that they plan to develop a low-density community with private golf course and equestrian facility.

PREPARED BY San Francisco-based Planning Analysis & Development, the current EIR addresses several density alternatives proposed for land.

These include:

- 160 acres per unit. This designation would allow development of 125 residential units. The EIR discusses both a clustered and scattered pattern.
- Permanent grazing. This designation would recognize the historical use of Rancho San Carlos as a livestock operation.
- 40 acres per unit, which would allow the development of 500 units.
- 10 acres per unit, as permitted by the general plan and recommended by the planning commission. This would allow the development of 2,000 units.
- Hotel and commercial. This would allow a 200-400 room hotel and 5,000 square feet of commercial space.
- No project. This alternataive assumes continuation of open space, the existing cattle ranching and other current uses at Rancho San Carlos.

Existing structures at Rancho San Carlos include the main ranch house, a guest house, 12 small houses, horse and feed barns and maintenance structures.

The ranch is primarily used for grazing about 800 head of cattle under a lease agreement.

Other uses include a racquet club, child care facilities and recreational areas.

A portion of the ranch on the floor of Carmel Valley is leased to the Rancho Canada Golf Club.

Other environmental issues evaluated in the EIR include visual quality, population, housing, employemt, water, access and traffic, natural resources, public services, noise, air quality, waste water disposal and cultural rescources.

Because of its location, Rancho San Carlos also falls under the purveyance of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, which governs the buildout of the valley, and Carmel Area Land Use Plan, which governs the coastal zone.

One area sure to garner local interest is the subject of traffic.

The Carmel Valley Master Plan contains several trigger mechanisms which can shut down building in the valley if traffic levels rise above acceptable levels.

The EIR indicates that, if density of 160 acres per unit is allowed, Rancho San Carlos could make a "fair-share" contribution to the Hatton Canyon Freeway project. It is assumed that such a contribution would also be earmarked for a proposal to widen the existing Highway 1.

If density is less, the EIR said, the project could be developed within the boundaries of the master plan.

That would make Rancho San Carlos subject to the growth limits of Carmel Valley limiting overall "trip generation."

Further, the ranch could contain a growth management plan similar to the master plan, which would contain its own trigger mechanisms.

The final EIR will be reviewed by the county planning department, which will pass its recommendation on to the board of supervisors.

The 209-page document is available for public viewing at planning offices in Monterey and local libraries.

The 45-day public review period ends Monday, April 9.

Earl Moser dedicated his life to preserving the environment

By DAVID LELAND

CARMEL AREA residents lauded Earl L. Moser this week for a life dedicated to protecting the Monterey Peninsula's scarce resources. Moser died Feb. 15. He was 92.

After retiring from Mobil Oil Corp. in 1961, Moser settled in Carmel Valley and began what many considered to be his life's work.

"Earl's contributions surpassed his conservation accomplishments," said Big Sur resident and fellow environmentalist Lloyd Jones. "His presence would constantly request that people express their best. He challenged the inspiration of each of us to share his vision of respect for nature — and we loved him for it."

Carmel Mayor Jean Grace also had kind words for Moser.

"He came here, retired here and then made himself famous," said Grace, who consulted with Moser over the years on local matters ranging from air quality to Carmel Valley parkland designations. "The world could do with a lot more Earl Mosers."

Former county supervisor and current 28th District Assemblyman Sam Farr heaped kudos upon Moser.

"Earl Moser was one of my mentors and inspirations," he said. "When Earl Moser spoke, everybody listened. He was a symbol of integrity and fairness and, above all, a champion for sound environmental planning."

Ironically, Moser's first environmental act in the area was his 1966 fight against Humble Oil, which sought to establish a refinery in Moss Landing.

Serving as co-chairman for "Citizens for Clean Air" with Charles Kramer, Moser helped block the oil refinery, a feat that many consider to be one of the most important environmental victories in Monterey County history.

In 1968 Moser was a leading member of a committee that raised $85,000 to help acquire the first segment of Jacks Peak Park.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors later saluted his work by naming one path the "Earl Moser Trail."

Moser was also instrumental in a 1973 elec-

Cloud-seeding, rationing head water board agenda

By NANCY HILLS

A REPORT on the rationing program and consideration of joining a county cloud-seeding program share the agenda for an upcoming water district board meeting.

Also on the list of topics is a report on public versus private funding of the Canada Reservoir.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board will meet at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 26 at Martin Luther King Middle School Auditorium, 1713 Broadway, Seaside.

The water board will receive a report on the administration and effectiveness of the district's 20 percent rationing program from the Water Rationing Management Audit Committee set up after the election.

While members of the committee will not reveal what the report states, information obtained by the Carmel Pine Cone indicate that it will criticize the commercial rationing program, in particular the use of base figures. The base figures are an "average" of the water use in a type of business reduced by 20 percent.

Businesses can obtain a variance and use the base figure for their business type as their water ration rather than comparing their own use to the year before. There are many complaints that the base figures are inaccurate and often allow a business too much water.

Also, efficient administration of the rationing program, particularly in the enforcement area, has been severely hampered by the lack of money and the district has collected few fines.

The committee is expected to make recommendations for changes to the program.

Also on the agenda is consideration of joining Monterey County in a cloud-seeding program.

Monterey County Flood Control District Assistant Engineer Joe Madruga explained that the county board of supervisors will vote, probably next Tuesday, on funding a cloud-seeding program. The company county flood control is proposing for the project is Atmospherics, Inc. of Fresno, he said, at a cost of $45,000 for the rest of the rainy season, which runs through May.

"On average, cloud-seeding increases the amount of rainfall by about 10 to 12 percent," Madruga said.

The county tried it in 1971 and 1972, but was unable to ascertain exactly what the results were. Additionally, at that time, there were legal questions about "who owned the clouds" and whether increasing the rain in one area took rain from another further inland.

Recent research indicates, Madruga said, that does not seem to happen and the courts have usually upheld the cloud-seeders in previous court cases.

Madruga said that the cloud-seeding would extend from Monterey to Nascimento and along the Big Sur coastline. Cloud-seeding involves dropping silver iodide and dry ice into potential rain clouds. Moisture collects around the tiny silver iodide particles, forming droplets.

"Often what happens now is that we have clouds with moisture but not enough nuclei — dirt and dust particles, really — to allow drops to form," Madruga explained.

The district board will consider joining in paying for the cloud-seeding project at its next meeting.

In other business, the board will receive a report from Bechtel Engineering on the cost of private and public ownership of the Canada Reservoir. Currently, California-American Water Co. has taken the lead in ownership of the proposed reservoir. If Cal-Am owns the reservoir, it would be "privately" funded, meaning no public funding loans. That could make the project more expensive.

Earl Moser lauded for his concern for environment

Moser's work toward protecting the peninsula's unique and natural beauty led him to receive the Sierra Club's National Special Achievement Award in 1983.

Perhaps Moser's biggest interest was his quest to keep the area's air pure. With that in mind, he helped initiate the Monterey County Air Pollution Control District and served on its advisory board for eight years.

"He was the father of the air pollution control district," said Grace, who, before working for that agency, served in an advisory capacity.

Carmel Valley attorney and counsel for Monterey Regional Park District Anne McGowan agreed.

"Earl Moser had fierce dedication to making good air quality in Carmel Valley," she said.

Moser was also elected to the Carmel Sanitary District board and served for four years.

A STAUNCH believer in monitoring the area's growth to take in environmental concerns, Moser served as a member of the Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee, which outlined a course of action into the 21st century.

It was Moser's eye for detail that enabled many lay people to understand complicated land use plans and be able to take part in the planning process.

"He wanted to provide a way for people to participate in the environmental dialogue that has shaped our lives around here for the past 30 years," said Brian Steen, Big Sur Land Trust executive director.

In recently years Moser served as a trustee and president of the land trust.

In a statement released after his death, Moser termed his work with the land trust as having "given him a greater sense of accomplishment than any activities prior to retirement."

Steen credited the well-liked Moser for setting up many an important meeting.

"He was a gentle leader — he would open doors for people, literally, and set up meetings with people who were the decision-makers," Steen said. "He was the diplomat."

Moser managed to walk a fine line in the land trust's recent $1.35-million acquistion of 1,097 acres of forested land in Carmel Valley.

In addition to finding funds to buy the land, Moser also dealt with representatives of the Westbrook Land and Timber Co., who were selling the property.

MOSER WAS born on Feb. 3, 1898 and spent his youth in Osterdock, Iowa, where his father owned a general store.

As a boy, Moser milked cows, took care of a horse and buggy, attended a one-room school through the eighth-grade and travelled a distance of six miles in order to receive a high school education.

Moser attended Grinnell College in Iowa on a partial scholarship and graduated in 1920.

During that same year, Moser served as one of the first professors at the American University in Cairo, Egypt, teaching English for three years.

He then attended Harvard business school, where he obtained a master's degree.

After working in a Kansas bank for a year, Moser took a position as assistant professor with the University of Kanasa, where he taught finance and banking.

He then became an assistant professor at the University of Oregon.

From there Moser travelled to New York City to work in foreign trade with a company that would become Mobil Oil.

After 32 years with Mobil, Moser retired after spending 13 years in Australia and 13 years in Seattle, Wash. and Los Angeles.

Moser is survived by his wife, Lois; a son, John Moser of Seattle, Wash.; a daughter, Patricia Moser DuBridge of Saratoga; and five grandchildren.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the Big Sur Land Trust, to the Sierra Club Foundation or to Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa 50112.

She drops bid for Farr's seat; has other priorities

By DAVID LELAND

FOR THE time being, at least, Pacific Grove City Councilmember Susan Whitman has abandoned her quest to unseat Assemblyman Sam Farr of Carmel.

'I intend to seek higher office, there's no two ways about it. But this is my choice today because it is so important — now.'
— Susan Whitman

Instead, she has accepted the task of serving as the Central Coast chairperson for the "Yes on Prop. 107" campaign.

"I intend to seek higher office, there's no two ways about it," said Whitman, 41, who last week filed a declaration of intent to run for the Assembly's 28th District. "But this is my choice today because it is so important — now."

The Housing and Homeless Bond Act of 1990, appearing as Proposition 107 on the June 5 ballot, would authorize $150 million in general obligation bonds to provide financing for a variety of housing programs for the homeless, elderly, handicapped and families with children.

Whitman termed the measure "the son of" Proposition 84, a $300 million bill passed in 1988 providing for the acquistion and rehabilitiation of existing homes for low-income families.

Proposition 107's funding could be used for homeless shelters as well as acquisition of homes and mobile home parks.

"Everyone who is an advocate for housing will want to be involved in this campaign," said Whitman, who serves as president and co-founder of the Affordable Housing Corporation of Monterey County. "Proposition 107 offers a rare opportunity to implement a sound and compassionate public policy which dramatically improves the lives of our neighbors."

Other chairpersons involved in the campaign include Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy, Sen. David Roberti, Fresno Mayor Karen Humphrey, Long Beach Mayor Ernie Kell and Sacramento City Councilmember Jor Serna.

McCarthy called Whitman "among the best and the brightest of California's young leaders and a most effective advocate for housing in her community."

Campaign efforts will be coordinated by the California Right to Housing Campaign and the California Task Force for the Homeless, which have joined forces for the effort.

Celebrities have adopted the homeless cause and will undoubtedly appear in its behalf. Among those serving on the board of advisors for the California Task For The Homeless are Steve Allen, Ed Asner, Whoopi Goldberg Ali McGraw, Martin Sheen and Henry Winkler.

AS A PG councilmember, Whitman has been instrumental in securing block grants needed to rehabilitate houses in PG for low-income families.

"It's (Proposition 107 campaign), something I know about personally," said Whitman, a small business owner. "This is an opportunity to do something about that."

Whitman, who spent six years on the board of the PG Chamber of Commerce and served as chairwoman of the Holman Highway Task Force, received accolades from "Yes on Prop. 107" campaign manager Stephen Hopcraft.

"We actively recruited Susan both because of her dynamism and because of the importance of this legislation to the Central Coast following the devastating effects of the earthquake," he said. "We are very pleased to have someone with her energy aboard."

PG CITY Councilmember Susan Whitman has abandoned her quest for seat in the state Assembly and will serve as Central Coast chairperson for the "Yes on Prop. 107" campaign.

She is also a member of the Monterey County Homeless Task Force, which is in the process of drafting a five-year plan on the homeless for the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Whitman added that the governors of 15 other states with needs for low-income housing are closely watching the results of the non-partisan Proposition 107 campaign.

"This (affordable housing) is the No. 1 issue everywhere, not just on the Central Coast," said Whitman, adding that the measure will not increase taxes. "We expect it to be a real positive campaign."

TAX SHELTER! TAX SHELTER! TAX SHELTER!

Although Congress has closed most tax "loopholes" there are still some legitimate tax shelters available. Of these, one of the most attractive to the prudent investor is an investment in your local school district.

Do you realize that there are students in the Carmel Unified School District who are unable to participate in music programs because they cannot afford a musical instrument? We are certain that there is a small orchestra stored in the attics and garages of the Carmel School District. Why not do a little house cleaning and dig out that old trombone, flute, etc. and make a tax deductible donation to the Carmel School District?

Apple IIE computers are also needed. Our elementary school students begin their computer education on the Apple IIE. We know many of you have abandoned your IIEs since they are no longer state of the art and have them sitting around the house serving no useful purpose (probably next to the trombone). A deductible donation of that old computer to the school district will immediately impact students on a daily basis.

If you can help please write Carmel Unified School District, c/o FOCUS, P.O. Box 221088, or call Lynn Bohnen at 624-2692 or Pam Klaumann at 624-8759.

Sam Farr quietly seeks his sixth term in Assembly

By DAVID LELAND

ASSEMBLYMAN SAM FARR, seeking a sixth, two-year term in office, believes that government works best when local citizenry is involved in the process.

Running unopposed in the June 5 primary election, Farr said that the government's principal responsibility is to inform.

"Government is here to serve the people, not make people serve the government," said Farr, 49, a longtime Carmel resident. "Government has to essentially teach or provide information so people can make intelligent decisions."

'Government is here to serve the people, not make people serve the government. Government has to essentially teach or provide information so people can make intelligent decisions.'

— Sam Farr

Farr said he has held 18 town hall meetings during the past six months — attendance has not been overwhelming, except for after the Oct. 17 earthquake.

It is the duty of locals to show up, he said. If not, misinformation can spread like wildfire.

For example, Farr said many Carmel residents have been errantly pointing fingers at the state transportation agency for plans to construct a highway through Hatton Canyon.

"People are blaming Caltrans, but the process was initiated at the local level," said Farr, whose district includes Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, referring to dictates set forth by the Monterey County Transportation Commission.

Farr met several times with residents and was amazed at the results.

"I blew the whistle on the design," said Farr, who attended Carmel High and the old Sunset School. "Not so much because I object to the use of the canyon, but because the concept was not a good one for the community."

Public sentiment has now moved the transportation commission to reconsider its negative view of widening the existing Highway 1.

"It was carried further than I believed it would," Farr said. "(But) the community's making that choice on an informed basis."

Much of the process of making informed decisions is based on intelligent information-gathering — a prime case in point is the possible closing of Fort Ord.

"This is a healing time to relook Fort Ord and what it represents to the community," Farr said. "If and when there is a wind-down at Fort Ord, that information will be used to make a decision."

Farr said one possible use for the base would be that of a state university. But he scoffed at the idea of an immediate closing.

"I'm of the belief that Fort Ord is not going to close in the near future," he said, citing problems such as the $150 million needed by the feds to clean up toxic waste at the site. "But that doesn't mean that before the end of the decade that things couldn't change."

DURING HIS tenure in Sacramento, Farr has stressed the importance of economic excellence, educational excellence and environmental protection, which he terms "The Three E's."

He views his greatest accomplishment as signing into law a measure that expands and develops the state park system.

Farr has also authored bills that eliminate corporal punishment in state schools, promote agriculture abroad and has further initiated the use of computers in the classroom and in teacher training.

Farr is also chairperson of the Assembly Committee on Economic Development and New Technologies. Those subject areas include industrial development and planning; high-tech industries, the impact of military spending in the state; and tourism.

In addition to serving as vice chairman of both the Joint Committee on the Arts and the Joint Committee on Science and Technology, Farr is also a member of standing committees on education, finance and insurance, government efficiency and consumer protection, natural resources and disaster preparedness.

Farr has also been active with the Monterey Bay Task Force, formed to protect the Monterey Bay and enhance the study of the area.

The assemblyman did express frustration with the continual rift existing between the state and county government.

Farr disagreed with the common belief that the state mandates plans but does not provide sufficent funding.

He said the state constitution makes it illegal to mandate plans without offering enough money. If proof can be found, a claim can be filed against the state.

Instead of offering only money, the state should control areas such as social services at the county level.

CARMEL RESIDENT Sam Farr, state assemblyman for the 28th District, is running unopposed in the June 5 primary election in search of a sixth term two-year in Sacramento.

"He who governs pays," he said, adding that the level of relief would be determined by each county. "We have to re-examine the assumptions of government."

Farr defends his multi-term status, while others call for a ceiling on the length of terms politicians serve in office.

One accusation posted by opponents of more than two terms is that favors become too prevalent.

"The public perception is that it is done more than it really is," Farr said. "There's not as much vote trading as you think."

Farr added that the hardest part in passing legislation is in getting a bill off of the Assembly floor, not out of committee where a simple majority rules.

Carmel Valley loses one of its 'Grand Ladies'

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL Valley lost one of its most gracious ladies Tuesday, Feb. 20 with the death of Edith Alt.

"She was a very fine person who is going to be missed by by all of us," said neighbor and friend Walter Toy.

"She was a community organizer par excellance," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman. "When Edith got on the telephone, she was a general in charge of her troops. She knew how to touch people and get them involved."

'When Edith got on the telephone, she was a general in charge of her troops. She knew how to touch people and get them involved.'
— Karin Strasser Kauffman

"She had a tremendous sense of compassion and empathy for others less fortunate than herself," said friend Victoria Andrews.

Alt, 85, died at the Hospice of the Central Coast. The Hospice was just one of her many fund-raising causes, which included writing 175 letters to raise money for a defibrillator for the Carmel Valley Fire Department. She worked as a volunteer for Community Hospital Blood Bank. She was known as a devoted member and membership drive organizer for Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the Committee for Peace and Quiet. She also founded the Friends of Hidden Valley.

Alt was born in Vienna, Austria Feb. 2, 1905 to a middle-class Jewish family. In 1935, she fled to Spain to escape the Nazis. After three years, she left for the United States where she worked as an art dealer and then as a traveling salesperson for a wax company. When visiting friends in Chicago in 1944, she met a Berliner, Rudolph Alt, who she later married.

They both moved to Carmel Valley in 1963 where they lived until his death in 1975. She stayed and became deeply involved in community affairs.

One of her most important contributions, Toy said, was her organization in 1985 of a group called the "Friendship Circle."

The group originally was four black couples and four white couples who met to have dinner to better understand each other.

The group has grown to include hundreds who still gather for dinner.

"It was one of the nicest things she had done," said Toy, who was an early member of the group.

"Her main concern was that she was a civil rights advocate," Strasser Kauffman said.

Alt received the the Quota Club Woman of the Year Award in 1986 and then, in 1988, the Monterey County Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union Ralph Akinson Civil Liberties Award.

Toy said that Alt requested there be no services, but when her attorney returns in a few weeks, "we will have an old-fashioned wake for Edith as she wanted it where we get together and have a good time and remember her."

News notes:

Seniors program needs participants

IN SEPTEMBER 1987 the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department began a program to benefit senior citizens of the community in two ways.

First, senior citizens who live alone and are often "shut-in" their residences with little or no contact with friends or relatives, can be provided with the security of knowing that someone does truly care about their welfare. Also, those concerned with their physical well-being will have someone to check on them daily.

Second, seniors interested in participating in some type of community program will be able to work with those in their own peer group by volunteering to place these daily telephone calls to the recipients of the program.

Currently, the department has a full staff of volunteers, however, anyone wishing to be placed on an alternate list to fill in when another caller is unable to make it or is away on vacation, is encouraged to call for information.

Telephone calls are made daily by a volunteer beginning at 9:30 a.m. No participant is ever restricted to their home; they need only contact the police department in advance if they plan to be away during the time the calls are placed to avoid any confusion. If someone fails to answer their telephone, a patrol unit is sent by to conduct a welfare check at the residence.

In addition to these daily telephone "visitations," social events are also planned periodically as well as home visitations upon request.

Anyone interested in becoming a part of this program should contact Desk Officer Cathy Dampier at Carmel Police Department, 624-6403.

Land use code binders available from the city

THE CITY of Carmel has its own magnum opus to sell these days, and it can come with a subscription for further installments.

The city has started a service that sells copies of the city land use code in three-ring binders for a "one-time only" fee of $30. For an additional $10 a year a subscriber will get updates to the code automatically sent to his or her address.

Mary Jahr-Purvis, planning services coordinator, explained that the city used to contract with a private firm to have updates entered into the code, but now city staff has taken over that duty.

"We will be handling the zoning code process of entering the code onto our computer and doing our own updates," Jahr-Purvis said.

That change enables the city to offer the code and changes to the public on a regular basis.

Both the $30 and $10 charges only cover the cost of printing and administration, she said. The updates will be sent within 30 days of the change.

So far about 70 attorneys and contractors have signed up, Jahr-Purvis said.

Those interested in the program should contact Mary Jahr-Purvis, Department of Community Planning and Building, Post Office Drawer G, Carmel-by-the-Sea, 93921 or call 624-6835.

IT IS reassuring to know that some of our large companies are sensitive and helpful to our cultural leaders. Example, the Pebble Beach Co. It is also reassuring to learn that so many of our active businessmen are generous with their time and talents to help generate funds for health needs. Example, the 11 men who organized the Hospice Ball.

The storm had blown over and the welcome rains abated momentarily as people from all over the area pulled into the circular drive of The Inn at Spanish Bay to attend the second black tie Hospice Ball.

It is only fitting that the ball was held at The Inn because the Pebble Beach Co. has donated land (on the Old Capital Site), for a larger care facility to meet the increasing needs of Hospice patients on the Central Coast. Besides, the ballroom at The Inn is lovely.

Only eight (of 11) of the busy "The Ball" committeemen were able to attend. Walter Becker has the flu and Jack Adams and Verle Bogue had pressing business in other places. However, the other stalwart supporters of Hospice were there to welcome friends and guests. Charlie Bancroft, Ron Frieberg, James Griggs, Kenneth Johnson, Thomas Pelino and Doctors Gerald Martin, Charles Snorf and Gerald Tarsitano.

All of the men readily admitted they received invaluable assistance from Vondra Bancroft (although modest Vondra would not accept credit for her efforts as coordinator).

Who could resist dashing to the dance floor as the Harry James Orchestra of LA played such old favorites as Embrace Me, My Sweet? Not many. The young, who don't remember Harry James in the heyday of the big band era as well as those who certainly do remember. After all, it was a ball. An evening of dining and dancing, so, it was up on the dance floor before, during and after the four-course dinner. In between dances there was time for a sip of wines donated by Mike Moone, Smith & Hood, Ventana and Ken Johnson, along with savory bites of romaine salad, Spanish Bay Crab Cakes and roasted veal chop dinner.

Centerpieces (by Flowers Ltd.), were glitering "golden horns," tall slivery and silvery reeds and bright yellow blossoms.

Among the guests were Renata and Philip Hambrook of Monterey, Lynn Traynor, David Dewhurst (who flew in from Houston for the ball), Chick Hudson, Tom and Margaret Oliver and some 184 others.

Everyone had a great time but didn't forget the great cause. However, all good times must come to an end and at 11:30 the music stopped and the party ended on a high note of excitement.

The Monterey County Cultural Council's "Regranting Ceremony" was held at a luncheon sponsored by the Pebble Beach Co. at the Inn at Spanish Bay "Ballroom Central." MCCC president, Roderick L. Dewar, welcomed guests, the MCCC staff, board members and the representatives of 27 cultural organizations that enrich our lives with music, visual arts, theater/dance and radio. Mr. Dewar and all of those present were most grateful for the generosity of Mr. Tom Oliver, president of the PB Co.

The luncheon (featuring local artichokes and fish), was delicious and the service excellent. How nice that business expresses appreciation for cultural efforts in this manner. And it is helpful for all of us to be reminded of how many people are constantly working to enrich our lives in Monterey County.

Requests for grants almost doubled the amount received by MCCC for distribution (only $107,025 this year, which is a pity). George Rodman was chairman of the regranting committee made up of art professionals.

MARILYN ANTON and Judge John Anton met up with friends Raymond and Virginia Rosencrans at the Hospice Ball.

The lovely Carmelite, Ms. Joan Fontaine, honorary chairwoman, began the awards presentation with "It's lovely to play to a full house and to know there are so many concerned and caring citizens in our county." She added, "I went all over the globe looking for the ideal place to live and I found it right here. I came 'home' to live six years ago. I often wonder why people here bother to die. Heaven can't be better."

Then, Ms. Fontaine quickly called on representatives of the organizations to come forward to receive their grants. She dubbed Ron Weitzman the "Robert Redford of Monterey" and Marc Del Piero the "Clark Gable of the area." The regrant checks were presented by Dusan Petrovic, Sam Karas, Marc Del Piero and Karin Strasser Kauffman.

The largest grants went to the MP Museum of Art ($11,500), Youth Music Monterey ($10,800), Carmel Bach Festival ($10,000), M. County Symphony ($9,500) and the Lyceum of MP and PG Art Center (each $6,000), Artists Equity ($5,000), Grovemont Theater ($4,300), and so on.

Mr. Dewar, knowing that more funds are needed by the cultural groups and projects, had an idea for adding to the coffers. "Perhaps Joan Fontaine will sell kisses for $10." Joan quickly replied, "Make it $5."

Everyone went back to work cheered by the beautiful purple floral arrangement on each table, refreshed by a delicious lunch, and doubly appreciative of the arts and organizations that work to keep the quality high.

With invitations to six parties on the evening of Feb. 24th, perhaps the dress code will help you with the difficult decision of selecting your weekend social outings.

It is "wranglin duds" for the "Mitzvah Bar Ranch" at the Sheraton Hotel for "The Fiddler on the Hoof" dinner/-auction. "Forties garb" is right for "A Night at El Morocco" at the Inn at Spanish Bay for the AIDS Project and "Medieval finery" for sipping and supping at the "Midwinter's Night Revel" in Carmel Highlands' Tintagel for Waldorf School.

Mexican costumes are half the fun at the Monterey Civic Club's "Cascarone Ball" at the Hyatt Regency. For the Opening Night Gala for "El Salvador" at Grovemont Theater use your own judgment. Dress artistically for "The Open Studio Reception" at the Airport Terminal Gallery showing an exhibition by Artists Equity members.

More chances for costume shenanigans lie in store the following weekend. The "Cabaret Mardi Gras" on Feb. 27th, sponsored by L'Alliance Francaise la Peninsule de Monterey to benefit the scholarship fund, offers costume and mask opportunities with a different twist. Prizes will be given for the best costumes of a character from French literature. Following the costume parade at Rancho Canada Marie-Therese Taylor entertains with chansons.

Brazil has appeal for party themes. "Bravo Brazil," with Right around the corner on March 10th it's back into the sombreros and colorful Mexican attire for "La Fiesta Primavera" at San Carlos Hall. This dinner/auction has proved most successful as a party and as a fund-raiser for Chartwell School.

March first from 7-10 p.m. Marked designer pieces from the '30s, '40s and '50s (acquired from an estate), along with extremely high quality unmarked pieces, collectibles and costume jewelry will be on display throughout the attractive store as you partake of refreshments. In the meantime, some of the priceless pieces are shown in the windows for your advance perusal.

Even if you didn't book in time to attend the (ltd. number), cuisine classes offered by Masters of Food & Wine, you are all welcome to the Julia Child book-signing party at Highlands Inn at 2:30, Feb. 28. Her latest book is The Way To Cook.

Ms. Child has an unusual background. She is a native Californian (born in Pasadena), who, after attending Smith College, went to work for the Office of Strategic Services during WWII. Her duties took her to D.C., Ceylon and China during which time she met and married her husband.

In 1948, while on assignment in Paris, she fell in love with French cooking and began her culinary career in 1949 at Cordon Bleu. She soon found her name synonymous with classic French cooking and entertaining. Everybody in America knows her through her PBS cooking appearances, which began in 1963.

The Masters of F & W 1990 is exceptional because of three outstanding women chefs that are a part of the program. Along with Ms. Child, Joyce Goldstein of SF's Square One (who also has a new cookbook, The Mediterranean Kitchen), and Maria-Claude Gracia (a fifth generation French chef), all have gained fame in a profession that, until recently, was dominated by men.

The Masters seems to have been able to top the year before each time. This, the fourth, sounds like the best and it is not to be missed.

The "First Murphy"

IN 1900, Carmel-by-the-Sea was essentially rolling, sandy, tree-studded land, a paradise of natural and serene beauty. There were no cars...no tourists clutching their T-shirt purchases in plastic bags...and very few houses.

Early in the century, a widow, Mrs. Emma Murphy, left Minden, Utah with her four daughters and son M.J. for Los Angeles. There, she soon read in the newspaper about Frank Devendorf and his enthusiastic, visionary plans for Carmel-by-the-Sea. While her three oldest daughters worked in a telegraph office, she gathered up her youngest daughter and 16-year-old Michael and set off to see for herself. Many hours later, following a train journey and a four-horse stage ride, the Murphys arrived in the tiny city on the edge of the Pacific.

The Murphys' lives were instantly changed. The kindly Mr. Devendorf took the family under his wing. Young M.J. was an industrious boy, used to hard work on a cattle and horse ranch in Utah, and Devendorf promised him a job assembling portable housing (board and batten cottages which were shipped down from San Francisco). Always energetic and quick-thinking, Devendorf promptly wired the Murphy daughters in Los Angeles — "Come immediately!" And he sent the funds for them to do so.

The Murphy girls were said to be "at wit's end" when they received this message. They had no idea who Devendorf was and what it was all about.

Young M.J. put up a tent-house for the family, and by 1902, he was busily building his first residence, the tiny two-bedroom wooden cottage, today, 88 years later, still standing on the west side of Mission Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues (behind the former Emile Norman Gallery). There he lived with his mother and sisters. "It was a typical Carmel house of the time," says Murphy's daughter Rosalee Gladney, "with a hand water pump in the backyard, a screened porch and a big tub in the kitchen. I remember hearing that Dad had only one request. He wanted his bath first, not after all those girls..."

M.J. returned to Utah in 1904 to marry his childhood sweetheart, Edna Owens, and bring her home to Carmel.

In 1905, in association with Frank Devendorf and the Carmel Development Co., Murphy started building in earnest. The San Francisco earthquake in 1906, brought continuing business as "safe little Carmel" attracted many new residents from the Bay area.

In 1929, he established M.J. Murphy, Inc., a company which sold building supplies, did rock crushing and concrete work, and he operated a lumber mill and cabinet shop between Ocean and Seventh Avenue and Mission and San Carlos which today contains the parking lot of Wells Fargo Bank.

Edna Murphy worked closely with her husband, running the office and taking care of the mounting paperwork. They had four children — their son Frank, named after Mr. Devendorf, who had the distinction of being the "first white boy child" to be born in Carmel, daughter Fay and twins Rosalee and Kathleen. Longtime Carmelites remember with pleasure the sight of the Murphy girls in their white wicker double baby buggy and soon after the twin sons of Robinson Jeffers taking their own turn in the borrowed buggy.

Murphy built the original Tor House, and Jeffers worked alongside him, as an eager pupil, taking particular note of Murphy and his men's stone masonry technique.

The Murphys lived in a house that M.J. built at Monte Verde and Ninth avenue (still standing), complete with barn and horses. The house grew as the family did.

The '20s saw a significant number of the larger Murphy homes begin to dot the Carmel landscape. Houses of almost 2,000 square feet, according to the estimates in the Murphy files, were constructed for $2,000. He also built in Carmel Highlands and Pebble Beach as well, including several mansions, laconically described at the time as "very nice," and that was reflected in their price — a "whopping" $10,000 to $12,000.

Although, in recent years, it is the "fairytale Comstocks" that are singled out for attention, the fact is that it was M.J. Murphy who designed and constructed more sturdy, comfortable residences in Carmel than any other person. His notable ability to design in the styles of the times, eye for detail and his pride in his work were major contributing factors in establishing the look and character of the city. It can truly be said that during the 40 years Murphy was in business, virtually everyone in Carmel who wanted to build, repair or remodel sought his advice and/or involvement.

Many residents-to-be trusted his reputation and what they had already seen of his expertise to the point that they simply stated their specifications and asked to be notified when the job was done. This was true of several of the shingle homes along "Professors Row," all of which are "Murphy houses." Other of his clients were bay area and peninsula residents who commissioned him to design and construct Carmel summer cottages and then, delighted with the results, asked him to build more substantial dwellings for them in areas such as Hillsborough and Palo Alto.

Identified in the city's general plan as one of Carmel's Master Builders, Murphy's early homes included certain distinctive trademarks — 1-by-2 redwood siding milled to look like narrow clapboard, door details, windows with diamond shaped mullions and panes. The interiors featured clear heart redwood with built-in cabinets, board and batten walls and chalk rock fireplaces.

Murphy was equally adept with larger edifices. He did major building on the Pine Inn (which in his fledgling days he had helped move down the street to Ocean and Monte Verde from its original location at Ocean and Junipero, when it was known as the Hotel Carmelo). He was instrumental in the erection of the Highlands Inn, renovated La Playa Hotel, built the charming Fee Building next to the Harrison Memorial Library as well as the Library itself.

"Just before my brother Frank died," Rosalee Gladney recalls, "he said to me, 'Now you remember that. Dad designed and built the Library. Maybeck was a consultant, but that's all.' "

Approximately 300 houses later, M.J. Murphy retird in the early 1940s, feeling it was "time to take it easy," after suffering a mild heart attack. He died in 1959, one of Carmel's most respected citizens. He had served on the city council, was a founding member of the Manzanita Club and always an admirer of the beauty that surrounded him. Murphy was one of a group of citizens who were instrumental in planting the trees that grow down the center of Ocean Avenue.

His friends and family remember him as a man of strong pride. "He was proud of his work," his daughter sums up, "and he was a gentleman. He was proud of Carmel, too. He thought it was the best place in the world, and he wanted it to stay that way. He had so much love for Mr. Devendorf and all his help and encouragement. He never forgot the people who'd been good to him."

The fate of that first M.J. Murphy house, built 88 years ago, will soon be decided. It is in need of rehabilitation, yes. But there are those who feel strongly that it is both "historic" and "significant," a symbol of Carmel spirit and people at their best. With careful moving and renovation, this building could still have much to offer to the community.

"How about taking it to the Torres Street property, fixing it up and turning it into a meeting room or resource library on Carmel-by-the-Sea? — or a place to house Murphy or Sayer or Whittaker memorabilia?" ask some of the staunch supporters of the "first Murphy."

Others think it would be a useful addition to the Forest Theater.

If you have memories of M.J. Murphy you'd like to share...if you'd like to make a contribution to a fund for moving and renovating the house...if you are willing to contribute some carpentry work or if you have ideas for where you'd like to see it re-located, call Enid Sales at 625-0566. Or you may write to Mrs. Sales at 3206 Serra Avenue, Carmel 93923.

WHAT DO THESE HAVE IN COMMON?

The Hatton Canyon Freeway debate, the budget deficit, the proliferation of gangs and violence, high rates of illiteracy, the ongoing degradation of the environment, inflationary depressions, widespread homelessness, riots and insurrections, the plight of the Monarch butterfly, the increasing use of narcotics, famines and droughts around the world, terrorism, the intrusions of Big Brother, the deterioration of manners and civility, low-quality television programming, the next stock market crash, widespread poverty and hunger, high divorce rates, racism, the threat of nuclear war, businesses out for the quick buck, genocides, the impending destruction of the rain forests, train wrecks, the AIDS epidemic, bureaucratic ineptitude, inferior educational opportunities, the slaughter and mistreatment of our fellow species, economic chaos, oppression and injustice.

They all impede our ability to pursue happiness successfully;

They all come about as a result of the institutionalized insanity of non-proprietary (i.e. political) social structures;

They're insoluble within the context of those structures;

They're about to overwhelm us all;

They're impossible in a Natural Society environment, as disclosed in the powerful new concepts in volitional science and the Theory of Primary Property!

Abalone Cottage?

I HAVE a small treasure, found in a 60-year-old house that was being renovated. It's a sketch of a small cottage alongside what appears to be a bay or cove. At the bottom is an inscription: "Abalone Cottage, Point Lobos — Grace Salmon, 1924."

By a happy coincidence, shortly after I was given this special gift I met Kurt Loesch. Kurt was speaking at a meeting of the Point Lobos Natural History Association in Carmel, where he had just been greatly honored for his four-year dedication to the restoration of Whaler's Cabin at Point Lobos, now a treasure chest of Point Lobos history.

When I heard Kurt, with a twinkle in his eyes, relate how he extracted mementos for the museum from initially hesitant donors, I feared for my own treasure. But I couldn't resist: I called Kurt and within a few minutes he arrived at my house to check out this sketch. He found it fascinating. Neither of us had ever heard Whaler's Cabin or Cottage referred to as "Abalone Cottage," but Kurt felt confident that they are one and the same. Perhaps "Abalone Cottage' was the artist's own term for the small building?

For the moment at least, I still have my sketch. I — and its prospective keeper, Kurt Loesch (about whom, more another time) — would be pleased to talk to anyone who knew Grace Salmon or has heard the cottage described that way. It's another small but fascinating bit of local history.

A VISITING friend found out the hard way that diving at Point Lobos can be difficult. Not because of the kelp, but because of the competition. Only 15 permits are issued each day and getting one is almost as difficult as getting a ticket to the deciding game of the World Series. On this occasion, my friend had to settle for a less challenging dive off Lovers Point.

But all that is about to change, or at least improve. Dive permits can now be reserved, as much as 28 days in advance. Only those openings not already reserved are now up for grabs (in a lottery system), each day. Of course all this testifies to the compelling attractions of Point Lobos for divers: all the splendid and varied "critters" and plants to be seen and enjoyed.

THE SUPER Bowl is long past, but I do have a small tidbit to contribute to its lore. one of the peninsula police departments received a call right at the start of the game. The voice was that of an elderly woman. Her complaint? Someone's "boom box" outside her home was so loud that she couldn't listen to the game.

MILESTONES AMONG the devoted volunteers at Community Hospital recently: Gertrude Chappell set a new record for hours contributed. Of course she does so each time she comes on duty at one of the several departments where she serves. But this was special: Gertude hit 19,000 hours in December!

And Auxiliary member Ruby Goddard was honored in January not for his many hours but for his years — 87 of them. His fellow staffers at the reception desk helped him celebrate his birthday with a cake supplied by Pym Gilbert, Reception Desk Chairman. Helping at CHOMP is a family affair for these Carmel residents - Rosella Goddard works in the hospital gift shop.

WHILE WE are still at CHOMP: I watched housekeepers replace pillows on the couches in one waiting room. Curious, because they didn't appear to need replacing, I inquired. "We change the pillows about once a month," I was told, matter-of-factly. It's because they get much wear and are flattened as well as perhaps becoming soiled. The pillows are inspected, cleaned if necessary, fluffed up, and returned to duty.

THE TV movie in which I labored so long, risking frostbite, is to be shown on CBS Feb. 27. It has a new title: Stolen - One Husband. The stars are still the same - Valerie Harper and Elliott Gould. For all I know, I may again be the face on the cutting-room floor. If not, I'll be the wedding guest in the pink suit during one of the final scenes of the show. First row on the right during the ceremony, here and there (usually near a heat lamp), during the reception.

SPLENDID SENIOR

• What makes Pierre run?

He looked off into the distance. "It's unexplainable." Then: "I've loved running ever since I was a child. Now, the 'high' starts the day before a race and it's still there at the starting line." He added that there were health benefits too, but it was obvious that the personal high comes first.

This is Pierre Delfausse, Carmel Woods resident who in 1987, at the age of 70, set the Big Sur Marathon record for his age group (4:43:32). It was his for two years. "Then it was taken over by a young man of 72, a national record holder," Pierre said.

He started running with dogs on Carmel Beach, when he didn't even know what a 10K was. His first competitive run — for Beacon House — hooked him; he now has 103 races in his log and a wall covered with medals. Right now he is getting ready for the fifth Big Sur Marathon on April 29. His training includes running as estimated 500 miles between Jan. 1 and the race. He also volunteers in the marathon office, where he sees himself as being well-qualified to tell callers from all over the country what running the Big Sur route is like.

• What makes Pierre Le Jardinier get out there to work in peninsula gardens every morning? "It's outdoors!" After he retired from his thoroughly enjoyed career in the design, manufacture and sale of toys, and moved to Carmel, Pierre cheerfully "loafed" for two years. When a friend asked if he knew anyone looking for work as a gardener, he took it as a personal invitation; now he has that professional name and a full morning schedule.

• What makes Pierre Delfausse keep coming back to Community Hospital twice a week, as he has for the past 10 years? He has more to say about the times when he is just a staffer than when he is the supervisor at the reception desk: "It's more fun." That's where I first met Pierre and I was intrigued by his approach to visitors at the reception desk. Pierre says: "How may we help you?" The assumption that he will indeed help that visitor is a valid one.

• What makes Pierre go walking every day, regardless of the weather? Dogs! One of his first contacts in this area after his arrival in 1973 was new neighbor Dr. Dan Gornel (CHOMP physician who moved from the area some years ago). Dr. Gornel had two golden retrievers and it was Pierre who often took them walking. In due course Pierre had "pick of the litter' rights and started his own family of goldens. Nine puppies recently, one of which will stay with its mother, and Pierre. Pierre also claims to have a dog "disobedience" school for drop-outs from obedience classes.

• What makes Pierre run in such races as the Garlic Festival and the Broccoli Trot? He's a vegetarian!

• What makes him enthusiastic about the Army? "It's my very favorite thing," he claims. That's because of his experience in the ski troops (10th Mountain Division) in Italy during World War II.

Come on, Pierre, you told me your very favorite thing is toys ("Mr. Hockey" helped design a table hockey game when he lived in Montreal). And you said your favorite thing is running. And your favorite thing is gardening, the out-of-doors. And your favorite thing is being a helper at CHOMP. And your favorite thing is your family of dogs.

GOING TO see Driving Miss Daisy? Pretend Miss Daisy has the windows rolled down. The Golden Bough Theater has had no heat for quite some time. The owners, I am given to understand, are in New Jersey and as long as the customers keep coming, they won't fix anything. Even the taped recording says "it gets cold in the building." Is that any way to treat a grand old lady of Carmel like the Golden Bough?

Brown I

SIXTY YEARS after the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Plessy v Ferguson (1896), there had been significant changes in the makeup of the High Court, and in its attitude toward the effect of the federal Constitution upon the rights of the states.

As discussed last week, the Plessy decision was based largely on the concept of "original intent," or what was thought to be the intent of the framers of the 14th Amendment. As long as facilities for blacks were deemed "equal" to those for whites, segregation was deemed, in view of the court, to be acceptable under the law.

In 1953, President Eisenhower appointed what he thought to be a "moderate" Republican from California, as Chief Justice of the Court. As had several before him, and several after, the president had either misjudged his nominee, or the obligation of the office had its effect upon him. Other High Court nominees had done an about-face on the men responsible for their appointments, not least among them Hugo Black, William Brennan, Harry Blackmun and Lewis Powell, all political appointees whose philosophies were thought predictable, and who in the course of their tenure on the bench, went their own way. Appointment to the nation's highest court has had that effect on its justices. Says St. Paul to the Corinthians, "In a twinkling of an eye, this corruption shall put on incorruption."

Few appointments have had the effect of Earl Warren's, however. He seems to have been a natural leader, and a strong-willed one. Under Warren, the court handed down an unprecedented number of unanimous opinions and an equally large number of opinions which broke with court precedent.

Prior to Warren's appointment there had been several events relevant to the development of judicial thinking on the High Court. In 1937, Congress passed the National Labor Relations Act and a few years later the court decided a case, NLRB v Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp, which unlocked the door to a vast expansion of federal regulations over interstate commerce. In Jones, the court said, in effect, Congress is not limited to regulating commerce among the states as defined in the Constitution, but that Congress could regulate anything within a state, if such regulation is deemed "essential and appropriate" to protect commerce among the several states. It would be largely on the basis of this decision that the provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, forbidding racial discrimination in restaurants and other places of public accommodation, were to be upheld. It was one of several decisions of the 1930s which would shape a new view of the court's and Congress's role in regulating the states and create the foundation for the attack on segregation.

With the end of the Second World War, the expansion of federal power continued with a further reinterpretation of the 14th Amendment. Previously the guarantees of the First, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Eighth Amendments had been limited to federal court cases, but gradually in a succession of cases during the post-war years they were held to be incorporated into the 14th Amendment, and so applied through its "equal protection" clause to the states.

Never was this more true than during the 16 years during which the former governor of California presided over the court. From his first day as Chief Justice, Warren seemd to be seeking a case which would provide an opportunity to apply the new and expanded interpretation of the 14th Amendment to the field of racial discrimination. It would have to be a case with a special element, one which would justify the abandonment of more than half-a-century of judicial precedent. Several smaller cases in Texas and Missouri signaled the change. The country beyond the segregated South was ready, the Congress was ready and the court was ready.

So, we come, admittedly in some circuitous fashion, to Brown v Topeka Board of Education. Brown is actually two cases. Brown I (1954) originated when a black minister, Oliver Brown, went to court in 1950 to gain admittance for his daughter to an all-white public school in Topeka, Kansas. Brown based his case initially on the expanded application of the 14th Amendment and its "equal protection" clause. This was the same argument used and lost 60 years earlier by Homer Plessy.

In 1953, with Chief Justice Earl Warren presiding, and having lost through the lower courts on the basis of the precedent in Plessy v Ferguson, Mr. Brown's case was granted cert by the U.S. Supreme Court. To courtwatchers everywhere, this grant of certiori, the decision to hear a case, should have signaled the end of "separate but equal."

During the arguments, Brown's attorney, a present Supreme Court Justice, Thurgood Marshall, argued his case not on the basis of the 14th Amendment alone, but on the evidence allowed by the court from the writings of psychologists that the philosophy of "separate but equal" was, in the field of education at least, inherently unequal. Children segregated by race led among blacks to a feeling of inferiority lasting beyond childhood, and whose root causes lay in the act of segregation itself. The conclusions invalidated any possibility of separate facilities for education being equal. The argument was an essential justification in Warren's determination to reverse court precedent since the Plessy decision.

The court ruled unanimously to reverse Plessy, and Warren in his first year as Chief Justice wrote the decision stating, "We conclude that in the field of public education the doctrine of separate but equal has no place."

It is important to recognize that Brown I applied not to the entire structure of segregation, but only to public education, and even there it was limited in scope. Previously segregated public schools were bound only to accept students of other races who "applied" for admittance. No overt action on the part of the schools or communities to go out and solicit students, or otherwise remedy the structure of segregation, was required. It would take another year, and another decision (Brown II), to change the unconstitutionality of segregation, into the overt policy of desegregation. Brown II will be addressed next week.

CARMEL YOUTH BASEBALL

By Mary Parsons

Wet and wild

EVEN IN drought years, certain weather predictions can be made. For instance, it's usually safe to forecast at least a little rain (and wind!) for the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am — what they call "Crosby Weather." And it seems to me that for a number of years, no matter when we schedule our baseball tryouts, it coincides with some wet, windy or at least very cold stuff! But the elements never seem to dampen the kids' enthusiasm, and this year is no exception.

Tryouts continue this Saturday, Feb. 24, at Larson Field on Rio Road. PINTO, 10-11:30 a.m.; MUSTANG, 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m.; BRONCO, 1-2:30 p.m.; ROOKIE and MINOR SOFTBALL, 2:30-4 p.m.; MAJOR SOFTBALL, 4-5:30 p.m. (Tryouts for PONY and COLT divisions will be held at a later date.) The make-up date if tryouts are cancelled due to weather is March 3, with the following schedule: PINTO, 1-2:30 p.m.; MUSTANG and BRONCO, 2:30-4 p.m.; ROOKIE, MINOR and MAJOR SOFTBALL, 4-5:30 p.m.

Players who have not yet registered may do so at the tryouts, but should arrive a little earlier than the times listed. For more information contact Karen Huntington, player agent, at 624-5740, or the Carmel Youth Baseball message line, 625-1626.

are all responsible for insuring preservation" and this responsibility included protecting ourselves from the ever-present vultures who are out to make a killing off of "environmental" issues.

Until Mr. Jones gives us convincing evidence of what he sees as problems, we would be well advised to leave things as they are. The county is certainly understaffed and overworked, but it is far better to work with concerned local people than throw ourselves into the voracious maw of the state or federal bureaucracy.

Meanwhile, we would appreciate the Pine Cone putting its best investigative reporter to work interviewing Mr. Jones so that we can all know just what he is complaining about and in whose pockets he wants to put our money.

Keep the faith

Dear Editor:

As a card-carrying Republican, I properly appreciated House Speaker Foley's delivery of the State of the Union report, thus permitting our president to use his speech to tell us about all of the good things that we Republicans will be doing in the future.

Probably not many people listened to Foley. Most people would rather not know that our factories are closing, or about widespread government corruption, or about health care being shorted in order to fund a $7 billion super-collider toy for Bush's state of Texas, or even about the Social Security fund being used to hide part of our national deficit from public view.

With massive unemployment problems shaping up as we head into a long-festering economic adjustment, we certainly don't want to be told about $3 billion per year being given to Israel, $2 billion to Egypt, $1 billion to Iranian freedom fighters in Afghanistan, over $16 billion toward contracts in both the U.S. and Europe to keep the Star Wars fantasy alive, and it would be unpatriotic to question the wisdom of spending $150 billion per year on no longer needed military posturing in Europe and Korea.

A few of us in the tightwad class might prefer to not know that we also put out $180 billion per year to pay interest on the money we have borrowed, two-thirds of which was spent to buy the past nine years of economic prosperity, a great campaign issue.

Therefore, it is much better for us to just have faith, and keep our mouths shut, in full knowledge that President Bush, and then President Quayle, will lead us safely through a period of prosperity and tranquility until the Year 2004 AD, by which time the Democrats will surely have given up, maybe disbanded entirely.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

According to a survey of retirees taken by an insurance company, the major reason retired persons returned to work — or wanted to return to work — was the need to earn money, for living costs or for major special outlays. Many cited social and emotional benefits. One-third said their post-retirement work didn't make the most of their skills, but that was OK. Many in the survey had retired early and thus were receiving reduced pensions and Social Security checks.

In 1985, Stanford University researchers reported that limited drinking may reduce the risk of heart disease. Now, a government report warns that alcohol abuse can worsen ailments of the aging, particularly heart disease. A Surgeon General's Workshop on Health and Aging notes that hypertension, a major contributor to cardiovascular disease and strokes, increases in the elderly as alcohol use increases. As for a possible beneficial link between moderate drinking and coronary heart disease, the report says "this relationship is controversial" and more research is needed.

COMMUNITY HOSPITAL PRESIDENT TO RETIRE

Thomas E. Tonkin, 64, president and CEO of Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, has announced his retirement effective Oct. 25, 1990.

Tonkin — who has been chief administrator at the hospital for 35 years — will be succeeded by senior vice president Jay Hudson, 52.

Tonkin will continue to serve as president and CEO of the Community Hospital Foundation, the parent company of CHOMP. His responsibilities include community relations, construction activities, fund-raising, and enhancing the aesthetic qualities of CHOMP.

Hudson said he anticipates "no major changes in philosophy or policies" when he takes over the hospital's day to day operations on Oct. 25.

Hudson's new title will be president/chief operating officer. Administrators expect a smooth transition in the eight months before Tonkin's departure.

Hudson has served as the second in command at CHOMP since he came to the hospital in 1968. He was named a vice president in 1982, senior vice president in 1985 and chief operating officer in 1987.

Tonkin announced his retirement Jan. 29 at the Community Hospital Foundation annual meeting held at the Monterey Conference Center.

CARMEL RESIDENT APPOINTED TO VISTA

For the first time in at least 10 years, Monterey County residents have received appointments to serve as VISTAs (Volunteers In Service To America).

Fernando Guzman of Carmel, Isable Lauderdale of Prunedale, Guna Hebbar and Lois McNulty, both of Monterey, will be working on behalf of the Alliance on Aging Food Bank for Monterey County during the calendar year of 1990.

The VISTAs will be assisting with the earthquake disaster recovery effort in the Pajaro area. Further, they will help coordinate the accelerated expansion of the existing Food Bank in order to provide a variety of services to many nonprofit agencies in the county.

Later, the VISTAs will be used in an effort to increase food donations, mobilize community support for hunger relief, and develop well coordinated food assistance networks throughout the county.

According to its director, Neil Thompson, the Alliance on Aging Food Bank is the largest single provider of emergency food assistance in Monterey County. The VISTA appointments and the expansion programs have been made possible by the federal grant from ACTION, the U.S. government agency that administers the VISTA program.

VOLUNTEER CENTER ALWAYS IN NEED OF VOLUNTEERS

CRITIC AT LARGE

Dream on

THE DREAM Theater continues to bring in the excellent "small" and independent films that assembly-line chain theaters shun and film fans savor.

Case in point is this week's offerings at the independent Monterey theater: highly touted documentary Roger and Me, and in a fortunate stroke of luck, the recently Oscar-nominated British film My Left Foot, which opened Feb. 16, two days after the nominations were announced. The latter, of course, is a surprise nomination for Best Picture. In addition the theater is holding over The Music Teacher from Belgium and the popular and critically acclaimed The Little Mermaid.

The theater's booking policy not only takes a little foresight, but a lot of daring and intestinal fortitude. The Monterey Peninsula isn't exactly known as a filmgoers' Mecca, the abundance of film stars in the area notwithstanding. A promising film festival was quashed by gross mismanagement and the Monterey Institute International Film Series, the only other venue to regularly bring in excellent foreign and so-called "small" films, is still bravely struggling along.

So what gives? The abundance and availability of videocassettes is one possible answer. The public's lowest common denominator tastes for such exciting, but empty pablum such as Tango & Cash and anything by Eddie Murphy could be another. Plus the pool of film fans here is smaller compared to metropolitan areas such as San Jose or San Francisco. Those booking films into peninsula chain theaters (such as the giant UA chain), also don't have much confidence in peninsula film fans, with few exceptions. (Booking Paul Mazursky's Enemies, A Love Story into the Crossroads Cinemas this week must have taken a lot of faith on the part of the bookers.)

Another reason may be that — seeing how this is a popular tourist destination — there just might be too much to do around here, although you'll get plenty of arguments on that one.

But both the Dream and the film series continue to hang in there despite all odds, so there is hope. What film fans have to do is support and patronize these theaters. Don't just wait for the cassette; nothing can beat a viewing experience in a good theater with a good sound system. (OK, OK, so the film series is held in that dreadful auditorium at MIIS, but at least they're trying!)

JOHN NEWKIRK sings the role of the tramp and Jane Zambory portrays Miss Todd in the Monterey Opera Association production of Gian-Carlo Menotti's Old Maid and the Thief. It will be staged all weekend at Carmel's Mission Ranch Barn. (Photo by Robert Mohr/Stock Options).

Monterey Opera Association stages Menotti favorite in Carmel

THE MONTEREY Opera Association, Inc., will stage Gian-Carlo Menotti's Old Maid and the Thief, at the Mission Ranch Barn in Carmel.

Directed by Harrison Shields, the production will be staged at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Feb. 23-24, and 3:15 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 25.

Doors open at 7:30 nightly and no-host bar is available.

Jane Zambory sings the role of the title character, Miss Todd, in this one-act comic opera. She welcomes a tramp into her home as a permanent lodger, and treats him royally. But in her efforts to satisfy his ever-increasing needs, she resorts to stealing.

When neighbors suspect the tramp of being the thief, Miss Todd urges him to escape. But the tramp insists that since he is innocent he will remain and that Miss Todd must pay for her crimes.

Disillusioned, Miss Todd goes to the police with her sad story.

While she is gone, the tramp escapes with Miss Todd's maid (Nancy Williams), carrying away everything possible.

The tramp will be sung by John Newkirk, and the neighbor, by Juliette Williams.

Tickets to Old Maid and the Thief are $10. For reservations, contact Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Monster edition

NEWSBREAK: Thus it begins. September's 33rd annual Monterey Jazz Festival (9/21-22-23) already looks like a monster edition. Honcho Jimmy Lyons says signed contracts have come back for: Stanley Turrentine's group (Sunday night), brilliant 20-year-old Boston alto saxist Christopher Hollyday (Friday night), Ernestine Anderson (Friday night), Poncho Sanchez Band (Friday night closer), unit fronted by fine drummer Mel Brown (Saturday night), Michel Petrucianni Trio (Sunday night), Gerald Wilson Big Band (Saturday night), Joe Williams with his own backup crew (Saturday night), Dizzy Gillespie Quintet (Sunday night). More next time.

MONTEREY SHERATON'S general manager was on record today with a pledge to area jazz buffs and musicians. Despite some financial problems, William Hurley said, the major hotel will maintain its seven-nights-per-week live music policy.

I phoned Hurley after published reports claimed that the Sheraton was running behind on property tax and mortgage payments. The daily newspaper quoted him as saying there just wasn't cash flow to get through the slower wintertime period.

"This (situation) has no effect on our music programming," the executive said. "We've always had live music every evening and that'll stay the same. We're working on (the difficulty) and expect to have it solved in the near future."

So then. Playing the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club on Thursday night (2/22) will be excellent guitarist John Stowell with Smith Dobson Trio. Others: Ken Arconti Blues Band (2/23-24), Bob Phillips and Terry Miller (2/25), Don Pendergrass and friends (2/26), Jack and Ed Show (2/27), Higher Feelings (2/28).

• The Doubletree Lounge presents jazz pianist Ace Hill on Thursday through Saturday evenings (5:30-8:30). His blues-based sets have turned on listeners at countless venues and for many years.

• Over in Santa Cruz, Kuumbwa Jazz Center features Brazilian vocalist Astrud Gilberto on Monday night (2/26). Shows at 7:30 and 9:30. Advance tickets ($13 per) may be had via Center Stage Agency.

Miss Gilberto was booked there last October, but then the big quake hit. Her backup quintet includes son Marcello on bass. Latest album shows the lady still has that wistful and fetching sound. New material as well as bossa nova standards.

Future Kuumbwa dates: Courtney Pine (3/5), Mongo Santamaria (3/12), Michael Shrieve (3/19).

• Miles Davis plays Oakland's Paramount Theater early next month (Sunday 3/4). Reserved seats cost $25 and $22 apiece. Ticketmaster.

• Earthquake damage has killed the San Francisco jazz venue called Milestones. Owners say they won't reopen.

• Slim's in San Francisco offers Dr. John (2/23-24). Tracy Nelson Band added the first night — and "swamp boogie queen" Katie Webster the second.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH got an extremely valuable contribution this year. South African trumpeter Hugh Masekela's words were granted extra voltage by the release from prison of Nelson Mandela. Writer Diane Patrick interviewed Hugh for the February JazzTimes. Check out his vibrant observations:

"Eighty percent of the world's music today is affected by the African-American experience. It's amazing that under the conditions they had to live, they've affected the world the way they have.

"Our style of urban life in the townships is based on the African-American urban lifestyle and their resilience. Every little move that was made (in America) was emulated. I mean, I grew up with Bostonians and Florsheim shoes because Louis Armstrong or Duke Ellington wore them. The way Duke Ellington wore his belt to the side was the style in Johannesburg ... African-Americans were our role models because we wondered, how can people come out of slavery and still be so dynamic? So it's very important to me to let African-Americans today know what a heavy impact their music and culture have had on Africa."

The night after Nelson Mandela addressed welcoming thousands, Kuumbwa Center experienced SRO crowds as longtime social force and word artist Gil Scott-Heron sang and chatted his way through two shows that were tightly-crafted as well as inspired by larger events.

First, Gil's solo standup comedy was more than adequate. He wondered why TV weatherpersons give temperatures logged at the airport. "Nobody lives at the airport. What's the temperature at Willie's house? — That's where I'm going."

Then a strong band joined the tall, slender man whose casual dress — jeans, baseball cap — matched that of rapt university students. Scott-Heron proved himself an excellent actor when one well-known tune came down hard on Angel Dust. His characterization of a scattered and helpless Jellybean (Dust addict) was chilling, detailed, accurate.

At last occurred their song for "brother Nelson Mandela." Of course it was Gil's famed Johannesburg. The gleeful audience sang and chanted along — one can simply pray that the entire decade flowers from such freedom energy.

(NOTE: Jazz pianist Robert Abinante, of Abinante Music in downtown Monterey, spearheads the Monterey Bay Cultural Arts Center Committee. He honored our request and wrote the following update.)

Beginning steps have been taken toward the realization of a long-awaited Center for the Arts on the Monterey Peninsula. A group of approximately 50 individuals has been meeting since October to decide which paths to take to best realize this goal.

In John Detro's column three months ago, I mentioned that we were at the first steps of creating this committee. After three meetings with an average attendance of 37 people, we have come to the point of starting to take action. On Jan. 24th, I was elected chair of the committee.

The group consists of a number of individuals involved with business, the arts, politics. Attending the meeting of the 24th were four mayors and two members of the board of supervisors.

After being elected I made some comments; here is some of what I said:

"I'm involved with this committee for a Center of the Arts for my quality of life, for my family's quality of life, for my friends, for the local residents and for the local arts organizations. I believe you feel the same. But this is something we must remember constantly.

"The benefit of this Center may well extend to other segments of our community and to organizations outside of our area, but I believe all of us in our hearts joined this committee because we love this area and we want not only to preserve our present quality of life, but to raise it to an even higher level.

"We must continually find ways for the community to share with us what this Center should be. We must be willing to make adjustments to our own desires and our own beliefs, for it is in the community that our true strength lies.

"I ask us all to be listeners to what the community has to say and to be leaders in taking actions to get the job done."

A great amount of discussion followed, and it was decided to form a non-profit organization.

It is my hope that you readers will think about what this Center could mean to you. What place should there be for jazz or other art forms in which you are interested? Over the next three to six months, our committee will be seeking your opinions and needs. In the meantime, both John and I welcome letters with your thoughts. Just write to John in care of this newspaper.

ART NOTES

By Sam Colburn

Relationships

COLOR IN ART is intriguing. There are those artists who relate it to harmonies in music. The late Victor Di Gesu was one of these. In general warm colors come forward and cool retreat. This was made especially evident to me when I saw one of those great canvases that are put over houses when termites are being gassed. The green had dropped out, and the red came forward very strongly. I have seen a demonstration which involved a neutral grey spot which was encircled by an increasing area of orange pastel. As this became larger the color of the spot changed to green. Local artist, Jay Hannah, experiments with relationships, and the colors change as you move away from the painting.

THE CARMEL ART Association currently is showing the work of a trio of artists. They are Kathleen Crocetti, Michie Long and Keith Lindberg. Kathleen is a sculptor who uses different marbles and also casts in bronze, using a patina which is in strong contrast to the highly polished metal. I liked "Trojan Bird" in stone which is in place on a mirror so that you get multiple form. "Malva" is sinuous, and the form unusual. Not many sculptors attempt the ocean, but she does in the poetic "When Surf Gives into the Moon."

In each of Michie Long's paintings there is a solitary female figure. It is quite a challenge to make up a show with this involvement. His imagery is mystic with a touch of the primitive. The color is subdued but luminescent, and is especially effective in "Woman in Front of a Pink Door," and "Reclining on a Floral Couch."

Keith Lindberg is a bold painter. His strong figures are nearly always women, and they are looking in the same direction. His "Arrival" is full of sunlight. He has created a world in which the participants exist somewhere in the sky. His "Flying Drape" is perhaps a magic carpet.

AN UNUSUAL EXHIBIT is on view at the Carl Cherry Foundation at Fourth Avenue and Guadalupe in Carmel. This institute exists because a man by the name of Cherry invented a rivet, and his wife who inherited his estate, wanted to have a gallery in which to show her own work. There is also a tiny theater in this building.

"In Praise of Four Elements" is the title of the current display. The combination of photography and sculpture is salutary. George Christy's are great because of the color through which he attains depth. Robin Sawyer has an eye that sees beauty in desolate material. He uses the salt flats south of San Francisco Bay, and comes up with some strange images because of salt crystallizing in pools of brine.

Of all the states California offers more of a range of subject matter for the delight of the eye than any other. John Kennedy offers a shot of the high desert with clouds. In color this is quite warm and works well with a green pastoral of the hills near Coalinga. A lone pine high in the Sierra is a marvel of graphic clarity, and an ocean scene captures the encroaching fog.

The sculpture of Ania Malkowska is an adventure in ceramics. Her large bowls are, happily enough, uneven in form. Each one holds a bit of the sea. She needs tiny crabs to scamper through the debris of the ocean. She also creates large shell-like forms. She is a surrealist. There are flying helmets, columns with clouds, and cups with wings.

"In Praise of Four Elements" will be on View through Feb. 24.

THE CLAYPOOLE-FREESE Gallery is a new gallery on Grand Avenue in Pacific Grove. It is very well lighted, and the paintings are hung with adequate space between them. The opening hanging is called, "Introduxtions." Five artists are represented. They are Deanna Forbes, Barry Masteller, Karen Nagano, Michael Pavlov and Gerry Richman.

Deanna's painting reflects on what happens to birds when they encounter one of mans' protective devices. In this instance it is barbed wire and hummingbirds. These works are not illustrational however. The color is rich, and is not afraid to break the picture area as in "War Zone #14."

Gerry Richmond has great fun with color in Excavation #1 and #2. These are painted with a free swinging brush. They are acrylic on canvas.

"Center in XVII" is an acrylic on canvas by Karen Nagano. A cool rectangle breaks a warm field. There are receding planes in this picture. Michael Pavlov offers "Great Afternoon," and "That Afternoon." One is cool and the other hot. He is very thoughtful in his use of space. Barry Masteller is showing "The Stream" and "Distant Shore." I had not seen any paintings by him in this style before. In the later painting he succeeds in the upper half to create the effect of a mysterious distance.

GALLERY SEVEN has a one-woman show by Grace Meredith. Her imagery is not influenced by any school, and is expressed in a variety of media. She has developed her own techniques. One way of using brown paper results in what she calls Bantus. "Woman in Market Place" is one of these.

As you enter the gallery you will see two large pieces, entitled "Monterey" and "Colors." The latter is a very complex design with surprising color. There is a whimsical blue monster in this painting, and some figures at the bottom which are related to childhood experience. To the right on the wall at the end is a long painting called "The Stream." The patterns are intricate, and there is a flow of shapes from top to bottom. "Rug Recliner" is a very vital piece. There is a great flowering in this painting. The central dark holds it together.

"Going North" is a watercolor. The figure in this work is not immediately apparent. It is part of the form of the whole. She uses fabric in "Little Tourmaline," and "Tourmaline Glow." There is a wry humor about "Horse on Hill." Painted wood pieces brighten up this showing. "Gull" is a vibrant acrylic and very spontaneous.

A sculpture on wood is entitled "Snake Gal," and a sculpted head is of her son, Cyrus. Grace Meredith has a very innovative and diverse creative flow. This show, "Colors, Ca OOQOl" is an installation. You may see it through March 9 at Gallery Seven, 205 17th St., Pacific Grove.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joe Guzaitis

Book people

THERE ARE two "British" plays in the area just now — one nice, one nasty. This is the nice one — 84 Charing Cross Road. It involves the 20-year correspondence between a feisty New York scriptwriter and a London bookseller who fulfills this American woman's intense desire for esoteric books.

Helen Hanff is a self-taught scholar of English literature who makes her living as a scriptwriter for Ellery Queen mysteries and educational TV programs. She comes across an ad in the Saturday Review from an "antiquarian bookseller" and sends a query letter that ends up in the hands of Mr. Frank Doel. His warm response elicits yet another letter and the relationship builds. The 20-year epistolary dialog includes the period of post-war privation of the British people, which prompts her to send food parcels to Frank and his staff on the holidays.

They become her extended family, the young clerks fulfilling the role of the children. What we see is the passionate intensity of the scholar expressing herself to a likeminded soul. The books that Helene wants are esoteric, meaning here the likes of Donne, Pepys and Hazlitt. She wants them in finely bound editions because she is sensual about the things she loves. She wants them cheap as well, and in depressed Britain, she gets her wish.

She and Frank keep talking about her visiting the gang at 84 Charing Cross, but her dental bills, an apartment move, almost anything imaginable intervenes. The bittersweet ending leaves us with the implied message of carpe diem.

The role of Helen Hanff is played by Alice March who I hope to see more of. She builds a very believable character, a scholar, a writer, a middle age single woman passionate about literature and ideas, with her quart bottle of gin always by her side and her Chesterfields on the typewriter table. She exults in her explorations. She excoriates Frank when he first sends her an abridgement of the Pepys Diary or the wrong edition of Walter Savage Landor. She is not without her choler.

Alan Smith, who we've seen in many fine productions, plays Frank Doel, the main bookman at Marks & Co. His position in the relationship is more sensitive than Helene's since he can't yell back at her. He is warm and understanding in the face of adversity, including Helene's insistence on sending cash through the mail and her upset over receiving books wrapped in the cast off pages of discarded volumes. Frank Doel is grateful also for all the foodstuffs and kind words when they come. Therefore, ultimately, this cannot be seen as a peer relationship because the customer is always right and beggars can't be choosers. There is also the matter that a bookseller may not necessarily be a scholar but primarily a merchant. Smith conveys well the twisting and turning that Frank Doel's position entails.

The supporting staff are nicely balanced by age and gender but get very few lines. They do help bring some movement to what is, occasionally, a static stage. Director Nick Zanides, however, abuts the elements of the dialog tightly to sustain the action as much as possible. He also has the more static Frank deliver his lines in many different stances to keep his scene changing. No trouble with Helene, she's dancing all over her little apartment with rapture as often as not.

The set is excellent. Marlie Avant's design and Patrick McEvoy's construction make this a stunning piece of work from the trim work down to the trompe l'oeil window scene. Old Capitol Books of Monterey helped stock the quaint little shop. The only complaint I had was that when Helene changes apartments, a few more prop changes could have been employed to reinforce the idea.

Costumes are by Carolyn Krogh and nicely convey both the passage of time, Frank's poverty, and Helene's increasing success. At a point where things are rough for Frank, we see him appear in suit with mismatched coat and pants. The shop staff are appropriately draped for the period. Dean Winston operated the lighting board and made sure that the right spots were illuminated, and the wrong ones were not: sometimes a tricky operation on a small stage.

84 Charing Cross Road is a pleasant interlude among some plays with strong content that this season holds. It plays through March 10th at the Cherry Foundation, Fourth and Guadelupe, Carmel. Curtain on Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., Sundays at 2 p.m. Tickets through Center Stage Ticketing. 649-5561.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joan Swartz Paonessa

SRO Theatre stages 'The Anniversary'

AN ARRAY of rich talent, and much obvious time, energy and effort has been spent to produce the evening of unredeemed venom which passes for comedy in the SRO Theatre's current offering.

The Anniversary, by Bill McIlwraith, is all about "Mum," the quintessence of evil manipulation who serves as the excuse for many a boy gone wrong — in this case three sons with as many disturbed personalities. Fair enough as theory to be explored, but in McIlwraith's treatment the character of Mum is so incessantly malicious as to defy belief. She is presented as a one-dimensional harpy whose flat affect can be attributed to a lack of emotional levels which would give her credibility.

The whole piece (despite some zingy one-liners and a couple of appealing characters) is a contrived emotional shocker with less depth and dimension than Patrick McEvoy's well-designed set. Even an audience inured to wanton rancor by such pop-schlock favorites as Roseanne and Married with Children should recognize the failure of this playwright to assemble a credible plot on which to hang his unremitting insults. The sudden resolution does not arise from any visible character change or development. It emerges as an amateurish invention designed to wrap things up in a hurry.

Mickie Mosley Moorer has strong directorial gifts which are evident in the sharp pacing and high energy of the production. She and her appropriately-chosen cast often rise above the level of their material.

Nita Raichart is forceful as Mum, the woman who clearly relishes her predilection for depravity. Gina Ferrari plays Shirley in a sympathetic and believable manner. The play's most persuasive and satisfactory scenes are Ferrari's with Patrick McEvoy who crackles with a vengefullness verging on mania as Tom, Mum's youngest and most rebellious son.

In the role of Terry, the middle child and most conservative of the brothers, Peter Magee presents a pathetic picture of the angst and confusion generated by his feelings of guilt — feelings which Mum delights in keeping alive. Sue Fishkoff as Karen, his wife, brings to her portrayal a high level of intensity. She has some truly affecting moments as a woman trying to save her husband — and her marriage. Michael Weiss is Henry, the oldest son, who, it appears, will never shake off the shackles of Mum's possessiveness. Weiss gives a sensitive, charming and intelligent performance.

The aforementioned scenic design and decoration by McEvoy is properly evocative of Mum's dynasty. Roe Reed's lighting design and execution are excellent, while Denise Clifford works the sound console (Felix Sola's design) very smoothly. The stage crew, with Jim Sutty as stage manager assisted by Lorraine Olsen and Ms. Clifford, handles its assignments efficiently.

In short, the performances and production values are quite good here, despite the weakness and gratuitous malignancy of McIlwraith's script.

Workshop addresses sensuality

"SENSUALITY: Primary Road to Self-Knowledge," is the subject of a workshop presented Friday, Sept. 23 by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung. The workshop will begin at 7 p.m. at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

The workshop will explore possible answers to the questions: What is sensuality? What is its function in an individual's growth? Can it be dangerous? If so, when? And finally, is there a safe, practical, and harmonious way to explore and use sensuality?

Workshop leaders will combine mini-lectures with discussion and experiential activities. They are Michael Purcell, the peninsula's Feldenkrais practitioner and his associate Kathryn Goldman, together with Joseph Pagano, diplomate in the Arnold Mindell extension of Jungian ideas called Process-Oriented Psychology. This has its focus on the individual's physical and psychic ability to dream — and makes its agenda from the depths of one's sensory and unconscious "knowledge."

The Friends of C.G. Jung is an informal group of people who are sharing an enthusiasm for the seminal writings of the Swiss physician and philosopher. The public is invited to this and all other meetings of the group, which finds practical use in everyday life of Jung's thoughts.

Prior registration for the workshop is not necessary. Although a modest donation is suggested to defray expenses, it is not required for attendance.

THEATER REVIEW

By James P. Kinney

'Godspell' bows at the Wharf Theater

WHEN THE MUSICAL, Godspell, first appeared on the scene in the 1960s — that decade which revisionist media historians like to portray now as a blighted era when everybody walked around in tie-dye t-shirts, guitars strapped to their backs, scuzzy and sappy and zonked out on drugs — the show presented a fresh look at Jesus of Nazareth.

With singable, up-beat numbers like Prepare Ye the Way of the Lord, Day by Day and Light of the World, the show broke away from a more staid Jesus presented by mainline Christian churches to give people. especially the young, a Messiah who was accessible, lively and in touch with the feelings and aspirations of modern human beings.

It was no surprise that the squeaky-clean show proved very popular immediately with high school and college drama and musical departments and with church youth and liturgy groups as well. After all, there has always been a need to re-present the charismatic carpenter and wandering rabbi born 2,000 years ago in Palestine, revered by Christians as the Son of God.

St. Francis of Assisi did it in 13th century Italy, rescuing a Jesus trapped in cold, humorless icons glowering down from medieval monastery walls. Martin Luther and the Wesley brothers did it in the 16th century, making Jesus comprehensible once again through inexpensive bibles presenting the story of his life in the vernacular and in hymns that stressed his humanity and compassion, showing a flesh and blood Savior who in his short life interacted with common people in an uncommonly effective way.

But in watching the production of the John Tabelak — Stephen Schwartz musical recently opened at Monterey's Wharf Theater, directed by Gina Welch-Hagen, music by Barney Hulse and choreography by Laura Akard, it seemed to me that Godspell may not be aging all that gracefully.

The mostly young cast are talented and energetic enough. But I had the feeling this was a musical encounter with Jesus the Summer Camp Counselor, deftly acting out parables with his followers in Act One of the show, then leading them into the dark events leading up to his crucifixion and death in Act Two.

Doug Phillips' portrayal of Jesus is certainly appealing enough. The humor, the kindness, the disarming warmth are there. Also, Mr. Phillips sings very well. And his Jesus the Summer Camp Counselor I found much more appetizing than Jesus the Corporation Executive, Jesus the Fund Faiser and Jesus the Bible Thumper we have we have been exposed to on TV over the past 10 or 20 years.

The cast generally displayed a good ensemble spirit, as dictated by the director and the format of the show, one member emerging from the group to lead a song, then melting gracefully back into the chorus. Denise Terrazas showed good vocal talent in Day by Day; Kristina Harris lots of energy in Bless the Lord; Olga Legan and Victoria Ledesma brought great feeling leading the cast in All Good Gifts, one of the show's finest numbers.

Vincente J. Salazar brought his familiar energy and robust baritone to the rousing We Beseech Thee Hear Us and in the various characters he portrayed in the parable vignettes. Howard Hinckley, another well-known local performer, made Learn Your Lessons Well come alive for the audience. Jeanmarie McArdle delivered on the haunting On the Willows; Mel Ushakoff brought a puckish presence to all his numbers; Cassy Reed a brassy insousiance to Turn Back O Man and young Steven Mercurio, Jr. did a yeoman job keeping up with older castmates.

The set, designed by Renata Yundt and Scott Ranier, showed lots of interesting lines and color, suggesting a sale somewhere locally on stage doors and windows. Phil Pratt's lights enhanced the lively music and the action. The production staff was headed by the timeless Angelo DiGirolamo and isn't it good to have him back in action again with his energy and contagious high spirits?

Godspell, especially recommended here for kids accompanied by adults, will play Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30, Sunday at 8 p.m. through April 8th. Dinner, then theater, at the Wharf; a fine old Monterey tradition.

MUSIC CORNER

By Nathalie Plotkin'

Sit-back-and-relax

IN JUST the right kind of concert to attend late on a Sunday afternoon, the Monterey Bay Chamber Orchestra offered a program which can hardly be described as adventurous or demanding. Conductor Michael Nowak led his three dozen musicians through a selection of true audience pleasers, works to be enjoyed without any strain. It was real sit-back-and-relax music which went from the pre-Classical time of an early Haydn symphony, to the true Classical era of rather youthful Beethoven and also to the neo-Classicism of Grieg's "Holberg Suite." They couldn't go very wrong with these choices.

Haydn cast his "Symphony No. 22 in E Flat Major" in the already antique form of the "sonata da chiesa" which alternated slow and fast movements. The opening Adagio with the French horn and English horn intoning a chorale-like melody over an ostinato string accompaniment, was quite engaging. The orchestra sounded careful, but not stilted. The following Presto was rapid and graceful and was played with more fluidity. A rather heavy-footed Minuet, one of Haydn's peasant dances, was neatly rhythmic and the final Presto was taken at a sparkling tempo. The work was well within the grasp of the group, given the fact that the lack of rehearsals and performances has begun to take its toll on the tone and over-all cohesion of the orchestra.

The "Suite for Strings," Op. 40, better known as the "Holberg Suite" by Grieg, consists of five short pieces composed in 17th century forms, but melodically and harmonically of the 19th century Romantic era. Again Nowak led the orchestra with an excellent grasp of tempo, dynamics and style. There was a fine sense of musical line brought out. One wished for richer, warmer violin tone in the Sarabande and the Air (Grieg's version of the "Air on the G String"). The cello section's vibrant full sound was very pleasant and appropriate.

The Beethoven "Piano Concerto No. 1 in C Major," Op. 15 with Edith Orloff as soloist came closest to a full realization of all the music heard. Miss Orloff is a fine pianist, highly skilled and musically aware, albeit with a rather muscular approach to the quasi-Mozartean passage work of the solo part.

Again the opening orchestral statement was carefully traversed. It was well shaped, but the string tone was raw. Miss Orloff played with intelligent musicality. Her scales were firmly outlined and her trills scintillated. Nowak made the orchestra into an excellent accompanist and they were very satisfactory in support of the pianist. The Cadenza was an almost Brahmsian sounding virtuoso showpiece.

The Largo, on the other hand, was played with sensitivity. The pianist was smooth and elegant and here produced that longed-for legato touch. The Rondo was delivered with verve and spirit and the many humorously misplaced accents were delivered with dexterity, but here again a lighter approach would have been more appropriate.

The last concert of the season on June 3rd will also be led by Michael Nowak and will feature Richard Todd, French horn in the "Concerto No. 3" by Mozart. The orchestra will offer works by Handel, Bartok and Bach.

Chamber Music Society presents Shostakovich Quartet in concert

THE SHOSTAKOVICH String quartet will perform at Sunset Center Theater, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 23. The concert is presented by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

Andrei Shishlov, violin; Sergei Pishchugin, violin; Alexander Galkovsky, viola; and Alexander Korchagin, cello, will perform Schubert's Quartet in A Minor, Op. 29; Shostakovich's Quartet No. 4 in D Major, Op. 83; and Tchaikovsky's Quartet No. 3 in E flat Minor, Op. 30.

The Shostakovich String Quartet gave its debut at the Moscow Conservatory in 1967, and by 1979 were officially designated the Shostakovich Quartet. The members of the ensemble have always felt the greatest affinity for the music of Dimitri Shostakovich. His fifth quartet was the first item in their repertoire.

In their 23 consecutive years together, the quartet members have accumulated a repertoire of more than 150 works. They have played in all the principal cities of the USSR, and in 30 nations on four continents abroad.

They made appearances at the Edinburgh Festival in 1987 and again in 1988, as well as at Adelaide's super-Festival of the Southern Hemisphere and at Amsterdam's Concertgebouw, where they played the complete Shostakovich Cycle.

They made their first North American tour in the spring of 1988. The 1989/90 season includes concerts in Canada, in various locations along the Pacific Coast and in the Hawaiian Islands and Hong Kong.

All four of these musicians attended the same performing school and share similar artistic views and principles. At their very first rehearsals together at the Moscow Conservatory, the young musicians began to play with precision of intonation and to find exact coordination, demonstrating qualities which, for many string players, remain the objective for which they aspire. Not only is the Shostakovich Quartet an important Soviet ensemble on the world's concert scene, it is also a group with a sense of dedication and a unique style in dignified keeping with their namesake's contribution to the total 20th century repertoire for string quartet.

Single tickets are $10 ($5 for those under 21) at the door before the concert. For information call 625-2212.

TAX SHELTER! TAX SHELTER! TAX SHELTER!

Although Congress has closed most tax "loopholes" there are still some legitimate tax shelters available. Of these, one of the most attractive to the prudent investor is an investment in your local school district.

Do you realize that there are students in the Carmel Unified School District who are unable to participate in music programs because they cannot afford a musical instrument? We are certain that there is a small orchestra stored in the attics and garages of the Carmel School District. Why not do a little house cleaning and dig out that old trombone, flute, etc. and make a tax deductible donation to the Carmel School District?

Apple IIE computers are also needed. Our elementary school students begin their computer education on the Apple IIE. We know many of you have abandoned your IIEs since they are no longer state of the art and have them sitting around the house serving no useful purpose (probably next to the trombone). A deductible donation of that old computer to the school district will immediately impact students on a daily basis.

If you can help please write Carmel Unified School District, c/o FOCUS, P.O. Box 221088, or call Lynn Bohnen at 624-2692 or Pam Klaumann at 624-8759.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: BETH KNOX, aka BETH TRITCHKOV, aka BETH KNOX TRITCHKOV

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of Beth Knox, aka Beth Tritchkov, aka Beth Knox Tritchkov.

A PETITION has been filed by THELMA BECK in the Superior Court of California, County of Monterey.

THE PETITION requests that Thelma Beck be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the independent Administration of Estates Act. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. This is the child who can make the trade deficit disappear.

Only a child.

But, like all American children, Michael Oliveras, inventor of the Swivel Head Rest for airline travelers, is a very special child.

For our kids have a creative, inventive heritage second to none. Given a bit of encouragement, their touch of genius will one day create new jobs, new industries—and turn our trade deficit into a trade surplus.

The encouragement comes from an education program and contest called Invent America! It challenges our kids to exercise their native ingenuity, and turn their minds toward any problem they'd like to solve.

Just write Invent America!, 510 King Street, Suite 420, Alexandria, VA 22314, or call 703/684-1836.

REALTOR®

A RARITY

HARDER and harder to find nowadays...the old-fashioned Carmel charmer. Remember when there used to be scores of them? Our newest listing is one of the last of those little redwood cottages, with a cheery brick fireplace and open beamed ceiling. It's in a rustic garden setting in a prime south of Ocean Avenue location — just where everyone wants to be. Hardwood floors, new tile in the kitchen and bath, redwood interior, plus two bedrooms, and garage. If you want to see how Carmel used to be, this is it! $529,000.

LOCATION: DOWNTOWN CARMEL

JUST LISTED...and exceptional condo in the heart of Carmel within walking distance of everything in the village, perfect for the retiree or the vacationer. There's a spacious living room with fireplace, dining area, up-to-date kitchen, two bedrooms, and two baths. This unit was completely redecorated only two years ago, and it includes a filtered fresh air system with double windows on the south side. Parking in the garage underneath. $350,000.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

EITHER FOR investors or buyers looking for a starter home. We have three pieces of improved property for sale in Seaside, each on a level, fenced lot measuring 50 by 140. On two of the lots, there's a starter home with living room, kitchen, two bedrooms, and bath, offered at $110,000 each. On the third lot stand a four-bedroom home and a two-bedroom home, offered at $145,000. Each lot is zoned for a duplex. Call for details!

ENCHANTED OAKS

WE'RE SURPRISED no one has snatched up this ranch-style home in a very good location or upper Pebble Beach. With three bedrooms, two and one-half baths, living room, dining room, and family room, there is much potential here to create a most attractive family home. All it takes is a good decorator (you, perhaps?), a little imagination (yours?), and $475,000 (your friendly lender?)

PEBBLE BEACH POTENTIAL

WHEN YOU think of the cute shops in Carmel, this might be just the kind of building you have in mind. Attractive from the street, it offers a facade of half-timbered and brick construction, and it's on several levels, with an enchanting little court shaded by oak trees in the middle of the upper level. The property is occupied by three shops and a studio apartment. The building is highly visible, there's good foot traffic, and the block it's on is being substantially upgraded. A fine investment for the long term! $850,000.
